

No. _____

IN THE
SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES
State of Iowa, Petitioner

vs.

Planned Parenthood of Greater Iowa, Respondent
ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO
THE 8th CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS
PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

Attorney General of Iowa
Des Moines, Iowa

Question for the Court: “Has the fact that all unborn babies are humans/persons been sufficiently established by juries, expert witnesses, state legislatures, individual judges, Congress, and the absence of any contrary affirmation, to invoke Roe’s ruling that state legislatures and courts should now protect their 14th Amendment rights?”

[This is not an actual legal brief that has been or will be filed in any court case. This brief is an example of legal arguments available to defend, in court, a state or federal law that completely outlaws abortion. In order to make this readable for all readers, legal terms and idioms will be explained in this font, in brackets like these.]

Attorneys

TABLE OF CONTENTS

OPINIONS BELOW	1
JURISDICTION	1
CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED	1
STATEMENT OF THE CASE ( What got us in court )	3
REASONS TO GRANT THE WRIT ( Why SCOTUS should hear the case )	6
Judges force Iowa to violate the Constitution	6
Lower courts violate Roe by misapplying Roe	7
Courts won't let States assert "Legitimate State Interest"	8
Courts below conduct counterfeit Trials by Jury	11
ARGUMENT IN SUPPORT OF THESE REASONS
Iowa can no more legalize abortion than slavery	12
All fact finders agree	13
Juries	14
Expert Witnesses	16
State legislatures	18
Individual judges	18
Congress	22
The §1841(c) Delusion	24
§1841(c) doesn't make unwanted babies less human	20
§1841(c) doesn't keep states from outlawing crime	27
18 U.S.C. §248 doesn't make anyone less human	27
A personhood challenge is ripe	28
...though it wasn't for Rhode Island in 1973	28
...or Missouri in 1989	30
Was Roe's "collapse" clause nullified by Casey?	31
Whether I am human: a value judgment?	32
Partial Birth – still no review of "when life begins"	33
Roe's "Collapse"	35
( The clause concedes that "collapse" is possible, by an authority greater than SCOTUS, that is less in doubt. The clause welcomes evidence supporting "collapse", and concedes that sufficient evidence must end legal abortion. )
All "humans" are "persons"	38

Slavery & abortion were outlawed together	53
Stare Decisis : we do not challenge Roe. We rely on it	55
Errors in abortion prevention cases	59
God's Relevance	61
No Roe backup is possible	66
Summary: Abortion on trial	68
CONCLUSION	69
INDEX TO APPENDICES
APP. A: Opinion below	70
APP. B: Trial court entry of judgment	70
APP. C: Constitutional and Statutory Provisions	70
(the text of the Preamble and 14th Amendment to the Constitution, and of 18 U.S.C. § 1841(d) which defines all unborn babies as humans)
APP. D: Roe's Legislative history	71
APP. E: Verses Roe missed	76
when Roe said Christianity supports abortion
APP. F: Errors in abortion prevention cases	84
APP. G: Legal abortion has no backup rationale	92
APP. H: Judge Clark Ruling on Abortion Facts	139
APP. I: Expanded Finding of Facts: Resolution	161
APP. J: Dorlands Illustrated Medical Dictionary	166

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES CITED

(How to read case citations: first are the names of the two sides opposing each other in court. Next is the volume number of the book in which the court’s ruling may be read; for example, “580” means it is in the 580th book in that series – enough books to cover the wall of an average size living room, as an alternative to painting it. Then is the abbreviation of the name of the series. Then come two numbers: the page number on which the case begins, and then the page number where the quote is found. Finally in parenthesis is the year the case was decided. So if you want to read any of these cases, search online for everything except the second page number.)

Cases	Page number
Allison v. City of Birmingham , 580 So. 2d 1377 (1991)	89
Bonbrest v. Katz , 65 F.Supp. 138 (D.D.C.1946)	73
Brown v. Board of Ed. , 349 U.S. 294, 300 (1955)	58
City of Wichita v. Tilson , 253 Kan. 285 (1993), 855 P.2d 911	19, 84-86, 139-160
Cleveland v. Municipality of Anchorage, Alaska , 631 P.2d 1073 (1981)	20, 88
Daley v. Meier , 33 Ill.App.2d 218, 178 N.E.2d 691 (1961)	73
Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharm., Inc. , 509 U.S. 579 (1993)	135
Detwiler v. Akron , C.A. No. 14385 at 22 (9th App. Dist. 1990)	22
Doe v. Israel , 358 F. Supp. 1193, 1199 (1973)	8, 28-29
Doe v. Israel , 1 Cir., 1973, 482 F.2d 156, cert. denied , 416 U.S. 993	28, 89
Doe v. Scott , 321 F. Supp. 1385 (N.D. III. 1971), cert denied 409 U.S. 817 (1972)	49
Farley v. Sartin , 195 W.Va. at 674, 466 S.E.2d	73
Glon v. American Guarantee and Liability Inc. Co. 391 U.S. 73, 75 (1968)	44
Gonzales v. Carhart , 550 U.S. 124 (2007)	51
Gray v. State , 77 Tex Cr. R. 221 (1915)	43
Hamilton v. Scott , 97 So. 3d 728 (Ala. 2012)	18, 71, 165
Lawrence v. Texas 539 U.S. 558, 595, 123 S. Ct. 2472, 2493 (U.S., 2003)	84, 166

Levi v. Louisiana , 391 US 68, 88 S. Ct. 1509, 20 L. Ed. 2d 436 . . . . .	18, 44
McArthur v. Scott 113 US 340, 440 (1885) . . . . .	49-50
Minneapolis and St. Louis Railway Co. Beckwith , 129 U.S. 26 (1889) . . . . .	51
Nelson v. Galveston , 14 S.W. 1021, Supreme Court of Texas 1890 . . . . .	47
NOW v. Operation Rescue , 747 F. Supp. 760, 770 (D.D.C.1990) . . . . .	60
Ohio v. Rinear , No. 78999CRB-3706 (Mun. Ct. Hamilton Co., OH, dismissed May 2, 1978)	15, 164
Pennoyer v. Neff , 95 U.S.714,733-734 (1878) . . . . .	50
People v. Garziano 230 Cal. App. 3d 242 (1991) . . . . .	5,88
People v. Krizka , 92 IILApp.3d 288, 48 III.Dec. 141, 416 N.E.2d 36 . . . . .	87
Planned Parenthood v. CASEY , 505 U.S. 833 (1992) 9-10, 31, 32-34, 67, 71, 75, 84, 94-95, 97-100, 104-105, 140, 156, 158-159, 165, 166
Planned Parenthood of Mid-Iowa v. Maki , 478 N.W.2d 637 (1991) . . . . .	4, 59-61
Public Citizen v. Department of Justice , 491 U.S. 440	90
Pursley V. State , 21 Ark.App. 107, 730 S.W.2d 250 (1987), rev. refused July 22, 1987 . . . . .	88
Raleigh Fitkin-Paul Morgan Hosp. v Anderson 201 A.2d 537 (N.J. 1964) . . . . .	50
Roe v. Wade 410 U.S. 113 (1973)	Almost Every Page
Santa Clara Co. v. S Pacific RR Co. 118 U.S. 394 (1886)	51
Scott v. Sandford , 60 U.S. (19 How.) 393-394 (1856) . . . . .	101-102
Simmons v. Howard University D.C. Cir. 323 F. Supp. 529 (1971) . . . . .	46
State v. Courchesne , 296 Conn. 622, 689 n. 46, 998 A.2d 1, 50 n.46 (2010) . . . . .	18
State v. Kirkpatrick, Kansas , No. 93,465, May 30, 2008)	90
State v. O'Brien , 784 S.W.2d 187, 192 (1989) . . . . .	89

State v. Sahr , 470 N.W.2d at 191-192	5, 85-87
State v. Walton , 311 N.W.2d 113, 117 (Iowa 1981)	59
Steinberg v. Brown 321 F. Supp. 741 (N.D. Ohio, 1970)
	42-43, 162
Stenberg v. Carhart 530 U.S. 914 (2000)	33-34, 97
Thornburgh v. American College of Obstets., &amp; Gyne.
476 U.S. 747 (1986)	45, 62
Union Pacific R. Co. v Botsford , 141 U.S. 250, 253 (1891)	52
U.S. v. Carolene Products , 304 U.S. 144, 152 (1938)	13, 23, 162
U.S. v. Cruikshank , 92, U.S. 542, 553 (1875)	41
U.S. v. Kabat , 797 F.2d 580, 591 (8th Cir.1986)	5, 60
U.S. v. Palme , 14-17 U.S. 607, (1818)	46, 162
U.S. v. Vuitch , 402 U.S. 62 (1971)	67, 93
Webster v. Reproductive Health Services ,
492 US 490 (1989)	30-31, 45, 47, 140, 156, 158, 166
Whole Woman’s Health v. Hellerstedt , 579 U.S. ____ (2016)	9
John Peter Zenger trial of 1735	15-16, 164

Statutes

1 U.S.C. 1 §8. Definitions	40
18 U.S.C. §248 F.A.C.E.	27, 168
18 U.S.C. § 1841(c) (Laci’s Law)	24, 25, 27, 162
18 U.S.C. § 1841(d)	2, 4-5, 13, 22,
	24-27, 38, 69-70, 100, 162, 169
18 U.S.C. §3596 (b) Executions of pregnant women	52
Iowa 704.10 Compulsion	14
Iowa Code 707.7 Feticide	1

U. S. Constitution

Preamble	1, 51, 70, 105
5 th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution
	1, 22, 40, 42, 50-51, 58, 70, 102, 128-129, 137, 155, 164
13 th Amendment	54, 101
14 th Amendment	1-2, 6-7, 10-13, 17-18, 20, 22-23,
	35, 38-45, 47, 49, 51, 53, 58, 63-64, 67-71, 84,

87-88, 90, 93-94, 98-99, 101-102, 105, 115, 117,
128-129, 155, 162-163, 165, 167, 170
Declaration of Independence . . . . .	40-42, 63-64, 66, 87, 142
Model Penal Code § 3.02 . . . . .	145

Other legal authorities

1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England *129.1 . . . . .	71-72, 152
Clarke D. Forsythe, Homicide of the Unborn Child: The Born Alive Rule &amp; Other Legal Anachronisms , 21 Val. U.L.Rev. 563, 569 n. 33 (1987) . . . . .	37, 71, 73, 97
William R. Hopkin, Jr., Roe v. Wade and the Traditional Legal Standards Concerning Pregnancy , 47 Temp. L.Q. 715, 723 (1974) . . . . .	72
David Kadar, The Law of Tortious Prenatal Death Since Roe v. Wade , 45 Mo. L.Rev. 639, 639 (1980) . . . . .	71
W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 127, at 945 (5th ed. 1984) . . . . .	73
Charles A. Lintgen, The Impact of Medical Knowledge on the Law Relating to Prenatal Injuries , 110 U. Pa. L.Rev. 554, 600 (1962) . . . . .	73
2 P. Robinson, Criminal Law Defenses § 124(d) . . . . .	84-85, 89
Note, Torts—Extension of Prenatal Injury Doctrine to Nonviable Infants , 11 DePaul L.Rev. 361 (1961–62) . . . . .	73
Necessity as a Defense to a Charge of Criminal Trespass in an Abortion Clinic , 48 U.Cin.L.Rev. 501 (1979) . . . . .	164
Wharton, “ Criminal Law ”, Section 126, 128.) . . . . .	90

Bible Roe’s claim of Christian support for abortion “opened the door” rather wide [“When those trained in...theology are unable to arrive at any consensus...]

Definition: “Opening the door” is a common law legal doctrine that allows for the admission of inadmissible evidence by a party after an opposing party has “opened the door” to it by first introducing inadmissible evidence at trial.

Evidence is admitted under the doctrine when deemed necessary to counter the evidence that opened the door.” - USLegal.com

Genesis 1:27	. . . . .	127
Genesis 1:28	. . . . .	82
Exodus 12:49	. . . . .	117, 133
Exodus 21:22	. . . . .	26, 80-82
Exodus 21:16, 26-27	. . . . .	137
Leviticus 24:22	. . . . .	117, 133
Leviticus 25	. . . . .	137
Deuteronomy 1:9, 13	. . . . .	130
Deuteronomy 4:5-9	. . . . .	134
Numbers 1:16	. . . . .	130
Numbers 15:15-16	. . . . .	133
Psalms 127:4-5	. . . . .	82
Psalms 139:13-16	. . . . .	78, 81
Proverbs 24:10-12	. . . . .	79
Proverbs 26:7	. . . . .	105
Jeremiah 1:5	. . . . .	78
Jeremiah 32:35	. . . . .	79
Matthew 25:39-46	. . . . .	128
Mark 14:59	. . . . .	133
Luke 1	. . . . .	35, 78, 120, 169
Luke 11:46	. . . . .	118

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES
PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

[A “writ of certiorari” orders a lower court to deliver its record of a case to the higher court so the higher court can review it. This is a “petition”, or request, for the Supreme Court to take a case. The first round of briefs before SCOTUS – Supreme Court Of The United States – are just to persuade SCOTUS to take the case.]

Petitioner respectfully prays [asks] that a writ of certiorari issue [be issued] to review the judgment below.

OPINIONS BELOW [How the lower courts ruled]

The opinion of the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals appears at Appendix A to the petition and is reported at Planned Parenthood v. Iowa, #123456. The date the highest federal court decided the case was October 24, 2019. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U. S. C. § 1257(b). The trial court entry of judgment is in Appendix B. [The case number, name, and date are fictitious. The U.S. Code number and Appendix section are set by court rule.]

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

Iowa’s arguments are based on and involve the Preamble to the U.S. Constitution, 14th Amendment “equal protection”, and 5th Amendment “Due Process”. The text of these is in Appendix C. The text of the Iowa law challenged here is as follows: [This is what I propose saying in a law so that judges will not be able to overturn it.]

Iowa Code 707.7 Feticide.

New Section: Findings of Fact: The Iowa Legislature finds itself obligated to protect the Right to Life of all unborn babies by Roe v. Wade’s order that when the fact is “established” that “when life begins” is at fertilization, then “of course” the 14th Amendment requires states to outlaw abortion. Iowa finds that no fact could be more legally established than this fact, which is the consensus of all American legal authorities who have taken a position, in all categories of court-recognized finders of facts [Courts recognize courts as the best qualified of all legal authorities to understand law, but defers to the following legal authorities as having a better grasp of facts] – juries, expert witnesses, state legislatures, individual judges, and Congress with 18 U.S.C. § 1841(d). [Chapter 18 of the U.S. Code, section 1841, paragraph d.] Iowa finds that no American legal authority has affirmed that any unborn baby of a human is not a human/person, or that protectable “life begins” any later than fertilization. [Fertilization – when a sperm joins to an egg – is earlier than conception – when the fertilized egg implants itself in the wall of the uterus.] In view of this uncontradicted consensus, Iowa finds that its legal liability from noncompliance with the 14th Amendment, by failing to criminalize abortion, is greater than any legal liability from taking corrective action in advance of indecisive courts. [In the next two paragraphs, what is underlined is what should be added to the law. What is struck through is what should be deleted from the law. The rest is what the law already says that should be left alone.]

1. Any person who intentionally terminates a human pregnancy at any stage of gestation, with the knowledge and voluntary consent of the pregnant person, ~~after the end of the second trimester of the pregnancy~~ where death of the fetus results commits feticide. Feticide is a class “C” felony.

2. Any person who attempts to intentionally terminate a human pregnancy at any stage of gestation, with the knowledge and voluntary consent of the pregnant person, ~~after the end of the second trimester of the pregnancy~~ where death of the fetus does not result commits attempted feticide. Attempted feticide is a class “D” felony.<sup>1</sup>

3. Any person who terminates a human pregnancy at any stage of gestation, with the knowledge and voluntary consent of the pregnant person, who is not a person licensed to practice medicine and surgery or osteopathic medicine and surgery under the provisions of chapter 148, commits a class “C” felony.

4. This section shall not apply to the termination of a human pregnancy performed by a physician licensed in this state to practice medicine or surgery or osteopathic medicine or surgery when in the best clinical judgment of the physician the termination is performed to preserve the life ~~or health~~ of the pregnant person or of the fetus and every reasonable medical effort not inconsistent with preserving the life of the pregnant person is made to preserve the life of a viable fetus. [R60, §4221; C73,...]

A companion resolution, laying out additional legal arguments in support of this law, was enacted the same day. It is copied in Appendix I. (The letter “i”.) [Legislatures can pass both laws and resolutions. The difference is that laws have penalties which can fine people and put people in jail. They can include short statements of facts that justify the law or explain how to apply the law. Both are numbered to show where they are added to the state’s law books. A resolution is just a statement of facts with no penalties, that can be longer. Resolutions are not added to the state’s law books.]

STATEMENT OF THE CASE <sup>2</sup>

-
- 1 This section would criminalize distribution of RU486. Because even if the existence of a baby can’t be proved absolutely, the law criminalizes mere intent.
  - 2 Since this is a model defense for a case which has not yet occurred, this section, stating what has happened in the case so far, is of course fiction. However, it contains elements from past cases, and may be prophetic. In this scenario the state law is challenged in Federal court; but state laws are challenged as well in state courts.

[What got us in Court]

The Iowa Legislature outlawed abortion in January of its 2019 session. Iowa's governor signed the bill on Sunday, January 22, the 46th anniversary of Roe v. Wade. Iowa's law was immediately enjoined from taking effect by a single federal judge. In his expedited ruling, the judge did not address the defense for Iowa's law embedded in section (a). He instead refuted arguments Iowa had not made, that were unrelated to Iowa's actual defense, about what he called "religious" statements made by some lawmakers during the legislature's deliberations.<sup>3</sup>

In expedited action, the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled on October 24, 2019, leaving the deadline for Iowa's petition before SCOTUS to fall on the 47th Anniversary of Roe v. Wade.

It was never challenged in court that Iowa's law would save unborn human beings. Nor was it ever denied that unborn babies of human mothers are humans, but neither was it ever acknowledged. That was the "element in the room".

Neither the district judge nor the appellate Opinion Below rules on whether 18 U.S.C. § 1841(d)<sup>4</sup> legally establishes Iowa's view – that unborn babies of humans are humans/persons – as correct and controlling. ["Controlling" means having the authority to determine how a court must rule] Or on Congress's authority to determine this fact. Or on Iowa's <sup>3</sup> Again, this is fiction. But it is realistic. It was the Iowa Supreme Court's approach in Planned Parenthood of Mid-Iowa v. Maki 478 N.W.2d 637 (1991), which is summarized later, and in cases reviewed in Appendix F. As for court deadlines falling on significant dates, that has happened several times in cases I have been involved in; sometimes in ways that no man could have planned, and sometimes deliberately such as when Judge Huppert overturned Iowa's Heartbeat Law on the 46th Deathday of Roe v. Wade.

---

<sup>4</sup> 18 USC §1841(d) ...the term "preborn child" means a child in utero, and the term "child in utero" or "child, who is in utero" means a member of the species homo sapiens, at any stage of development, who is carried in the womb.

reliance on the statute. The record outside Iowa's own briefs [the rulings of the lower courts, the briefs of the abortionists, and the transcript of oral debate] omits any mention of 18 U.S.C. § 1841(d).<sup>5</sup>

No federal judge ever acknowledged Iowa's key defense, its fact issue, [its claim that the unborn are legally established as being, in fact, persons/humans, which ends legal abortion] its reliance [its defense, based] upon federal law, or on Iowa's reliance on Roe v. Wade's "collapse" clause. [The clause in Roe v. Wade which explains what will cause legal abortion to "collapse".] Iowa is still waiting for a court to rule on the facts and arguments that Iowa has actually presented, instead of the straw man [the debating trick of characterizing an idea you don't like but which you can't refute as something different than it is which is much easier to ridicule] which the Court substituted:

The legislature has no legitimate interest in "simply interfer[ing] with a...person's right to lawful activity". That "is generally not available to excuse" an undue burden on the fundamental right "under the Constitutions of the United States and of the State of [Iowa] to terminate a pregnancy...."<sup>6</sup>

The alleged "evidence" that Iowa claimed a "legitimate state interest" in interfering with lawful activity was not submitted by Iowa at trial, but by Planned Parenthood and the National Abortion Federation in its amicus, presumably to divert the court's attention from the 5 Again, this is fiction, but it is realistic. The 18 USC §1841(d) argument was raised in two cases for which I wrote briefs, but was never acknowledged by the judges. These scenarios are included to prepare readers for the breathtaking ability of judges to imagine a "Straw Man" to knock down as an alternative to addressing the actual defense.

---

It is a mistake to expect courts to squarely address the defense presented here. Only a very aware, informed public can make them. Otherwise they definitely will dodge the evidence; because if they squarely address this evidence, it will be impossible for them to leave abortion legal.

6 Again, this is fiction, but there is precedent for expecting a similar "straw man" dismissal of a state's defense. These phrases are taken from actual abortion cases: State v. Sahr, 470 N.W.2d at 191-192; U.S. v. Kabat, 797 F.2d 580, 591 (8th Cir.1986); and People v. Garziano 230 Cal. App. 3d 242, 244 (1991).

federal law upon which Iowa’s defense relies.

One doesn’t have to be religious to realize that the babies of humans are humans. One only needs respect for U.S. law. Every U.S. legal authority which has taken a position on the subject has unanimously agreed they are.

REASONS TO GRANT THE WRIT

Judges are forcing Iowa to violate the Constitution. The most urgent reason SCOTUS must grant Iowa’s writ is that the injunctions of federal judges are forcing Iowa to violate the 14th Amendment of the Constitution, according to Roe v. Wade.

“If this suggestion of personhood [of unborn babies] is established, the...case [for legalizing aborticide], of course, collapses, for the fetus’ right to life is then guaranteed specifically by the [14th] Amendment.” Roe v. Wade, 410 US 113, 156

This “suggestion of personhood” is now “established.”

But every court but SCOTUS says Roe v. Wade made that irrelevant.

Since the 14th Amendment directly obligates states to protect fundamental rights, preventing a state from protecting these rights is an unacceptable situation in which to place any state. Iowa has been out of compliance with the Constitution since at least 2004 when Congress joined every other court-recognized category of fact finders in establishing what Roe said must end legal abortion. For a state to finally realize its noncompliant condition, and promptly make itself compliant, only to be prevented by federal courts from obeying the Constitution and avoiding any further liability for noncompliance, is error which must be corrected immediately. How can there be a more “important question of federal law that has not been, but should be, settled by this Court”?<sup>7</sup>

---

7 This is one of two reasons SCOTUS will hear a case that are given in Lower courts violate Roe by misapplying Roe. A second reason to grant the writ is to correct a long line of appeals courts precedents whose conflict with Roe v. Wade was widened by the 2004 federal law, and which continue to prevent states' compliance with the Constitution.

The contrast between Roe and the long line of lower appellate court decisions could not be greater.

Roe professed inability of “the judiciary” to determine “when life begins”, a “question” upon which doctors and preachers have more expertise than themselves.<sup>8</sup> Since SCOTUS could not expect superior expertise on a question of law from doctors and preachers, SCOTUS had to have meant to treat the question as one of fact. Because of SCOTUS' inability to answer the question, the Roe justices invited unspecified but impliedly greater authorities than themselves to do so, and said abortion's continued legality would hinge on what they “establish”<sup>9</sup>. Roe said if abortion is proved to in fact kill people, then Roe's holding must “of course” become irrelevant.

Lower courts said the opposite. They said Roe made abortion so absolutely constitutionally protected that it is whether abortion in fact kills people that is irrelevant.

That error [error, in legal briefs, means not just a small mistake, but a mistake critical enough to reverse the entire ruling] was pioneered in the first abortion case, a 1973 review of [court challenge to] Rhode Island's law which had a strong statement that unborn babies are persons, and strong

---

Supreme Court rule 10c.

- 8 “We need not resolve the difficult question of when life begins. When those trained in the respective disciplines of medicine, philosophy, and theology are unable to arrive at any consensus, the judiciary, at this point in the development of man's knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the answer.” Roe v. Wade 410 US 113, 159
- 9 “If this suggestion of personhood [of unborn babies] is established, the...case [for legalizing aborticide], of course, collapses, for the fetus' right to life is then guaranteed specifically by the [14th] Amendment.” Roe v. Wade, 410 US 113, 156

criminal penalties for aborting them. Doe v. Israel, 358 F. Supp. 1193 (1973)

That reasoning was replicated in a long line of criminal abortion prevention cases (where the charge was usually trespassing or door blocking) but never again until now in a review of a state law.

Not that there were no further reviews of state laws. But none of those reviews of state restrictions of abortion (ie. informed consent, 20 week bans, medical standards), after Rhode Island, required courts to revisit “when life begins”, so it was not revisited, leaving Roe’s declared indecision about Life untouched.

“When [constitutionally protected] life begins” was usually the only contested issue in the thousands of criminal abortion prevention cases. That issue was the focus of the key element of the defense raised in virtually all those cases, which was most commonly called “The Necessity Defense”. The defense was that trespassing was necessary to save lives. The contested issue was whether there were any lives to save; there are none, if unborn babies of humans are not humans. It was in those criminal cases that the judicial doctrine became entrenched that whether human lives were in fact saved was irrelevant because SCOTUS made a mother’s right to kill whatever they are a “fundamental right” “as a matter of law”.

Possibly the most remarkable thing about all those cases was that even after dozens of appellate courts had ruled that SCOTUS made the unborn nonpersons “as a matter of law” so whether they were humans in fact was made irrelevant, defendants by the thousands continued raising the Necessity Defense as if they were simply unable to let go of the idea that whether abortion kills human beings is relevant.

Courts won’t allow States to assert their “Legitimate State Interest.” States were more submissive, after every court but SCOTUS told states that their “legitimate state interest” of saving unborn human beings from abortion was made unavailable “as a matter of law” by SCOTUS. In the line of reviews of state restrictions, no state between Rhode Island’s and today’s case challenged the status of abortion as a “fundamental right”.

Courts overturn laws that restrict fundamental rights unless they serve a “legitimate state interest” or a “compelling government interest” by “the least restrictive means possible”. Since abortion is officially a “fundamental right”, laws must restrict it as little as possible.

But abortion must be restricted as much as possible, to serve the only genuine “legitimate state interest” compelling enough to cause such struggle between legislatures and courts: “saving unborn human lives”. That legitimate state interest demands that every human life be saved from abortion (except in those rare cases where saving one life kills another) – in other words that virtually every abortion be outlawed.

Obviously the “legitimate state interest” of saving as many unborn babies from abortion as possible, and the “fundamental right” of mothers to kill what SCOTUS was not sure were unborn human lives with as few restrictions as possible, cannot coexist.

So those state restrictions became a search for some other “legitimate state interest” that courts would allow – that is, some other “legitimate state interest” than saving what SCOTUS was not sure were unborn human lives – that is able to indirectly mitigate some of the harm and still survive the court’s “strict scrutiny”. [“Strict scrutiny” is the name for the process of “reviewing” whether a law achieves a “legitimate state interest” by “the least restrictive means possible”.] (“Strict Scrutiny” changed its name to “Undue Burden” in Casey and Hellerstedt.<sup>10</sup>)

---

10 Planned Parenthood v. CASEY, 505 U.S. 833 (1992), Whole Woman’s Health v. Hellerstedt, 579 U.S. ___ (2016) Hellerstedt said it was not enough for a statute to be “reasonably related to (or designed to further)

But states could not even openly admit that any part of their purpose was to mitigate, as much as possible, the harm of killing unborn human lives, because of lower courts saying it is irrelevant whether those killed are humans combined with Casey which bars any restriction that “has the purpose or effect of placing a substantial obstacle in the path of a woman seeking an abortion of a nonviable fetus.” Planned Parenthood v. CASEY, 505 U.S. 833, 877 (1992)

That made it a liability for a state’s legislative “finding of facts” to say the reason for a regulation is to save as many unborn people as the courts will allow. That would be a confession that the real purpose of its regulation is to place as great an obstacle as possible in the path of abortion, which isn’t allowed. So the only acceptable goal of a “finding of facts” would be to prove that the state has a legitimate interest that would not be an “undue burden” on abortion.

That approach concedes that abortion will always remain a “fundamental right”, no matter how clearly the legally recognizable facts are that unborn babies’ right to life is protected by the 14th amendment.

Although this fatalistic view is demanded by every lower court which has considered the issue, it is fortunately the opposite of the position taken by the Supreme Court. SCOTUS said that when it is established what now has been unanimously established by every category of court-recognized fact finders, then the 14th Amendment, instead of protecting a mother's right to murder, must require states to outlaw abortion.

This constraint on reason has stifled the ability of states to even state what their real legitimate state interest is. Not only because Casey threatens states that their regulation will not be allowed if part of their motive is to a legitimate state interest.” That standard was dismissed as “the less strict review applicable where, for example, economic legislation is at issue.” Courts must go beyond that to “consider whether any burden imposed on abortion access is ‘undue.’” save unborn people, but also because it is legally awkward for an “informed consent” defense, for example, to cite the evidence that abortion is legally recognizable as killing people, and then to ask only for “informed consent”. So states are pressured to limit any “finding of facts” to some other goal that restricts abortion as little as possible.

---

Courts below [below the U.S. Supreme Court] conduct counterfeit Trials by Jury.

Since juries do not decide constitutional challenges to state laws, this point does not affect Iowa’s case directly. But it does, indirectly. Because if this error of courts below, the judicial doctrine has become entrenched that is against Iowa, that it is irrelevant whether those killed by abortion are in fact human beings with 14th Amendment protection.

The line of abortion cases which produced this state-stifling contradiction of Roe was not, except for one case, the line of cases about state restrictions like “informed consent”, medical standards, “heartbeat bans”, etc. It was, rather, criminal cases where individuals prevented abortions, mostly by blocking abortionists’ doors, and argued in their defense that unborn babies are in fact humans/persons, so that their actions saved lives.

In those cases, courts said Roe made abortion so irreversibly “constitutionally protected” “as a matter of law” as to make irrelevant factual evidence of its harm to infant humans/persons, so juries should not be encouraged to think it matters – or even be allowed to hear the evidence.

Judges in thousands of trials have so ruled. They were called “jury trials”, but when the jury is not allowed to even know the only contested issue of a case, and especially when that issue is a fact question, but the fact question in those jury trials is decided by the judge, that is a trial by a judge, not a trial by jury. The right to trial by jury is denied.

Both categories of cases share in common the error by which lower courts have ruled irrelevant the fact inquiry which Roe said was not only relevant, but dispositive.

ARGUMENT IN SUPPORT OF THESE REASONS

Iowa has no more authority to legalize abortion than slavery. The 14th Amendment restrains states from depriving any discrete [distinct, identifiable] class of humans/persons of “equal protection” of their rights, and especially of their fundamental rights, beginning with the most fundamental right: life. Unborn babies are such a class, according to every American legal authority who has ruled on the fact question.

The 14th Amendment protects all who are in fact humans. All case law including Roe treats all humans as “persons”,<sup>11</sup> and what is irrelevant is whether they are “persons” “as a matter of law”. In fact, the Amendment was passed specifically to protect those who “as a matter of law” were never treated as “persons in the whole sense”.

Roe almost says the opposite.

Roe said “the unborn have never been recognized in the law as persons in the whole sense.” Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 162 (1973). This was Roe’s rationale for presuming that legislatures did not regard the unborn as in fact “recognizably human”, Roe, p. 133. And because legislatures, in Roe’s view, did not treat the unborn as fully human, SCOTUS was “in no position to speculate” whether they are.

Roe did not say one’s protection by law was, and it obviously is not, evidence that one is not in fact human or that one has no constitutionally protected “right to life”.

It was a finding of Congress which was the final piece of evidence that turned Roe’s alleged doubt about “when life begins” into a demand that Iowa obey the 14th Amendment by outlawing abortion. Congress said in 2004 what Roe said must be said to end abortion. Congress “established” the unborn as being legally recognizable as humans/persons:

---

11 “These disciplines variously approached the question in terms of the point at which the embryo or fetus became ‘formed’ or recognizably human, or in terms of when a ‘person’ came into being, that is, infused with a ‘soul’ or ‘animated.’” Roe v. Wade, 410 US 113, 133.

18 USC §1841(d) ...the term “unborn child” means a child in utero, and the term “child in utero” or “child, who is in utero” means a member of the species homo sapiens, at any stage of development, who is carried in the womb.

Here is where Roe said what must be said for legal abortion to end:

“If this suggestion of personhood [of unborn babies] is established, the...case [for legalizing abortion], of course, collapses, for the fetus’ right to life is then guaranteed specifically by the [14th] Amendment.” Roe, p. 156.

According to Roe, now that federal law has “established” that all unborn babies, “at all stages of gestation”, are humans/persons, “the fetus’ right to life is [now] guaranteed specifically by the [14th] Amendment.” That is, it is the constitutional responsibility of states to “guarantee” “the fetus’ right to life”; and any state which fails to do so violates the Constitution.

Congress’ authority to find facts is especially deferred to by SCOTUS.<sup>12</sup>

All fact finders agree. 2004 is not when the conflict between lower courts and SCOTUS started; it is when the final category of court-recognized Finders of Facts –

---

12 ...the existence of facts supporting the legislative judgment is to be presumed...not to be pronounced unconstitutional unless in the light of the facts made known or generally assumed it is of such a character as to preclude the assumption that it rests upon some rational basis within the knowledge and experience of the legislators....the constitutionality of a statute predicated upon the existence of a particular state of facts may be challenged by showing to the court that those facts have ceased to exist. ...But by their very nature such inquiries, where the legislative judgment is drawn in question, must be restricted to the issue whether any state of facts either known or which could reasonably be assumed affords support for it. U.S. v. Carolene Products, 304 U.S. 144, 152 (1938)

Congress, whose fact finding is especially deferred to by SCOTUS – added its voice to the growing consensus of all court-recognized finders of facts that all unborn babies are humans/persons from conception/fertilization. No legal authority in America affirms that they are not.

Juries. When juries in criminal abortion prevention trials [for trespassing] were allowed to rule on whether human “life begins” at conception (or at least before abortions are possible) – the key element of the Necessity Defense, they agreed it does, and acquitted.

That defense was claimed in tens of thousands of abortion prevention trials.<sup>13</sup> That defense, often called the Necessity Defense, (In Iowa it is “Compulsion”, Iowa 704.10), says that what is normally against a relatively minor law is not against the law when it saves lives. The contested fact issue, therefore, was only rarely what the defendant did at the abortion doors; those defendants proudly admitted what they did. The only contested fact issue, which belonged before “the triers of facts” (juries), was, rather, whether unborn babies count as being in fact humans whose lives merit being saved.

That was almost always the only contested issue of the trial, and it was a fact issue, and its submission to fact finders was invited by Roe, and yet after several jury acquittals, judges stopped allowing defendants to tell juries about their only defense. But before judges started doing that, those early jury acquittals established the consensus of juries that all unborn babies are humans/persons.

The consensus of Triers of Fact “establishes” the fact.

After the court ruled that it would allow the [Necessity] Defense to go to the jury, the Women for Women Clinic dropped the prosecution. If the defense is permitted, evidence is introduced that life begins at conception. This evidence is rarely contradicted by the prosecution, which is merely proving the elements of criminal trespass. Rather than risk such a precedent, many clinics prefer to dismiss. In fact, defense counsel have admitted that their intent is to bring the abortion issue back before the United States Supreme Court to consider the very question of when life begins, an issue on which the Court refused to rule in Roe... (The Cincinnati Law Review footnote analyzes the case of Ohio v. Rinear, No. 78999CRB-3706 (Mun. Ct. Hamilton County, Ohio, dismissed May 2, 1978)

---

13 60,000 was the number of arrests reported in Operation Rescue literature in about 1990, after which there were thousands more arrests. Online, the figure is confirmed at <http://letstalkbooksandpolitics.blogspot.com/2018/06/> and www.pnj.com/story/news/2017/10/31/pensacola-plays-pivotal-role-abortion-struggle/819921001/.

By calling the goal of triggering Roe’s “collapse” clause through jury verdicts and appeals an “admission”, this law review author treats the resort to our court system as some sort of nefarious scheme which the clever author has finally exposed. The readiness of juries to acknowledge harm to unborn humans is seen as a threat grave enough to justify keeping the “triers of facts” from weighing the only contested issue in jury trials, which was a fact question.

This law review article documents the readiness of juries, invited to do so, to “establish” that unborn babies are humans/persons – a pattern otherwise difficult to survey because juries seldom explain their verdicts, and because few juries were ever informed of the contested issue.

This suppression of the evidence which juries would have supplied abundantly, had they been allowed, is like the suppression of evidence in the John Peter Zenger trial of 1735,<sup>14</sup> in which Zenger wasn’t allowed to submit evidence that his “zingers” aimed at the royal New York governor were the truth. “Truth is not a defense against libel”, the judge told him. In fact, proving those zingers were true would only make them sting worse, the judge explained, making them doubly “libelous”.

Zenger’s lawyer told the jury there should be no rule against telling the truth. (Had the jury also been censored from hearing the legal argument, we might not have Freedom of the Press today.) But how could Zenger persuade the jury that his zingers were the truth, with his evidence ruled irrelevant? “The suppressing of evidence ought always to be taken for the strongest evidence”, his lawyer told them. The jury agreed, and acquitted, giving us Freedom of the Press.

---

14 Apparently the only record of the trial was the one published by Zenger himself.

Today we may similarly reasonably infer, from the routine judicial suppression of evidence from juries about the nature of the unborn, in abortion prevention trials, that judges generally agree that juries, if allowed and informed, would virtually always find that unborn babies of humans are humans/persons from conception/fertilization.

The Cincinnati article only makes that inference official. We may take this inferred expectation for evidence in addition to the handful of jury acquittals where juries were allowed to rule on the fact question, that the consensus of Triers of Fact is that the unborn are humans/persons. Certainly among those juries who were allowed to take a position, there is consensus.

You may ask, how can juries settle “when a ‘person’ came into being, that is, infused with a ‘soul’”?<sup>15</sup>

Human courts suffer gaps between “legally recognizable” and “true”. But “legally recognizable” jury findings are about as close as courts can get to “true”.

Unlike public opinion surveys or petitions, which are normally not admissible evidence of facts, we test jurors for impartiality and educate them with the most qualified expert witnesses we can find.

Expert witnesses. Another category of court-recognized fact finders is expert witnesses. As the preceding Cincinnati Law Review article reported, it was typical of thousands of abortion prevention trials to bring in a doctor to testify that fully distinct human life begins from conception. It was “rarely contradicted”, implying sometimes it was contradicted; but in the absence of any physical medical evidence in support of any later time “when life begins” than conception/fertilization, we may presume that any such contradiction was not on the merits.

---

15 This is how Roe defines “person”. Roe v. Wade 410 U.S. 113, 133 (1973)

Appendix H contains excerpts from District Court Judge Clark’s ruling in favor of a defendant who flew in probably the world’s leading geneticist, from France. Judge Clark addressed the evidence and was persuaded by it. The Kansas Supreme Court overruled, but not on the merits of the defense. The Court did not even acknowledge that the defense or its evidence existed, choosing instead to shoot down a defense of the Court’s own invention which the defendant had not raised. See Appendix F.

Of tens of thousands of abortion prevention trials, thousands featured expert witnesses documenting the reality that unborn babies of humans are humans, long after judges stopped allowing juries to hear them. These offers of proof, of thousands of expert witnesses, in abortion prevention trials, were uncontested. They were almost never heard by juries, and never acknowledged by appellate courts.

Their unanimous testimony legally establishes that unborn babies are humans/persons, requiring states, according to Roe, to protect their fundamental rights.

Genetic evidence is routinely not merely tolerated but sought by courts to prove both that a human was there, and which individual human it was. In these cases, the existence of human genetic material is taken as proof that a human was there. So far, every unborn baby of a human mother has been discovered to contain genetic material which is certifiably human.

This mountain of unrefuted evidence in abortion prevention trials fulfills the test of the Supreme Court<sup>16</sup> for personhood and fulfills the requirement of Roe, p. 156, that if the preborn are humans/persons, abortion is “of course” unlawful.

---

16 “We start from the premise that illegitimate children are not ‘nonpersons.’ They are humans, live, and have their being... They are clearly ‘persons’ within the meaning of the Equal Protection Clause

State legislatures. “At least 38 states”, a Constitutional Majority,<sup>17</sup> “have enacted fetal-homicide statutes, and 28 of those statutes protect life from conception.”<sup>18</sup> Hamilton v. Scott, 97 So. 3d 728 (Ala. 2012)

Most of them incorporated findings of facts about the humanity of the unborn, and most of them have had their constitutionality challenged. All survived. In addition, a few states have enacted stand-alone personhood laws outside the context of Unborn Victims of Violence laws.

No state has affirmed that “when life begins” is later than conception.<sup>19</sup>

Individual judges. Although SCOTUS ruled itself incompetent to determine “when life begins”<sup>20</sup>, and it is hard to imagine any other court more competent than SCOTUS to judge the matter, and in fact no appellate court majority has taken a position on the matter either way of the Fourteenth Amendment.” Levi v. Louisiana, 391 U.S. 68, 70 (1968) (discussing illegitimate children).

---

17 Am I making up a term? Anyway, 38 is the 3/4 of the states needed to ratify a Constitutional Amendment.

18 Hamilton v. Scott’s basis: “See State v. Courchesne, 296 Conn. 622, 689 n. 46, 998 A.2d 1, 50 n.46 (2010) (“[As of March 2010], at least [thirty-eight] states have fetal homicide laws.” (quoting the National Conference of State Legislatures, Fetal Homicide Laws (March 2010) (alterations in Courchesne))

19 A careless reading of New York’s repeal of its partial birth ban on January 22, 2019, led to reporting in conservative media that the new law for the first time positively declares that unborn babies are not “persons”. They report that the new law says “ “Person,” when referring to the victim of a homicide, means a human being who has been born and is alive.” But that is the old law that has been there for years, and in context simply means that when the coroner investigates dead bodies found in his county, or in a jail, he will not investigate the bodies of unborn babies.

20 “We need not resolve the difficult question of when life begins. When those trained in the respective disciplines of medicine, philosophy, and theology are unable to arrive at any consensus, the judiciary, at this point in the development of man’s knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the answer.” Roe v. Wade 410 US 113, 159

except to say Roe made the matter irrelevant which Roe did not, a handful of individual judges have ruled that “life”, meaning human life, which merits protection of its fundamental rights beginning with the Right to Life, begins at conception/fertilization.

No American judge has ever ruled, on his own authority, that unborn babies are not human persons, which makes the finding unanimous among all judges who have taken a position.

For example, Wichita District Judge Paul Clark ruled for Elizabeth Tilson in 1992:<sup>21</sup>

I will find Mrs. Tilson’s evidence proffered through witnesses Lejeune, Hilgers, McMillan and Rue relevant to the issue here. ... life in homo sapiens begins at conception; and harm is the result of termination of life under most circumstances. That opinion...has always been foundation for the public policy in Kansas.

Judge Clark conceded that SCOTUS let

“a pregnant woman...make a decision whether to terminate her pregnancy without governmental interference...” [and]

“Any corporation authorized to do business and its clientele still have a right to do lawful business without interference...”

BUT “Roe and its progeny” did not reverse

“the public policy of the state of Kansas that the voluntary act of prematurely terminating a pregnancy...is a wrongful act.” [Thus it is illogical to say abortion “cannot be a harm because it is legal.”]

That is, the Supreme Court stopped states from outlawing abortion. But the Court could not make abortion harmless (in fact Roe explicitly declined to rule on whether abortion is a “harm”) – and thus Roe has no effect on the right of individuals, through the Necessity Defense, to prevent abortions. The “harm” of abortion is legally recognizable as serious enough to justify stopping it. In fact, Judge Clark said the Bill of Rights, in whose “penumbra” the Roe court saw a right to kill babies,

21 July 21, 1992, Case No. 91 MC 108, “Memorandum of Opinion Following Bench Trial”. Appendix H contains extensive excerpts. The complete ruling is posted at www.Saltshaker.US/SLIC/PaulClark.

...is law that protects the people from their government. [It] was [not] meant to protect people from fellow citizens.

Justice Dimond, on the Alaskan Supreme Court, has emphatically denounced the indecision of Roe and declared the unborn to be both human and persons. In Cleveland v. Municipality of Anchorage, Alaska, 631 P.2d 1073, 1084, he wrote:

(Concurring:) I empathize with the defendants' sorrow over the loss of human lives caused by abortions. I believe the United States Supreme Court burdened this court with a tragic decision when it held in Roe...that the word “person, as used in the fourteenth amendment, does not include the unborn...”, and that states cannot “override the rights of the pregnant woman” by “adopting one theory of life.”

I do not agree with the Court's conclusion that a state's interest in potential life does not become “compelling” until the fetus has attained viability. It stated its explanation for this conclusion as follows:

“With respect to the State's important and legitimate interest in potential life, the ‘compelling’ point is at viability. This is so because the fetus then presumably has the capability of meaningful life outside the womb. State regulation protective of fetal life after viability thus has both logical and biological justifications.” ~ "(410 U.S. at 163, 93 S.Ct. 731-32, 35 L.Ed.2d at 183) As Professor Tribe indicates, “One reads the court's explanation [of the magic line called “viability”] several times before becoming convinced that nothing has inadvertently been omitted.” (Tribe, Forward to The Supreme Court 1972 Term, 87 Harv.L.Rev. 1. 4 (1973] (footnote omitted]). I agree with Professor Tribe when he states, “Clearly, this (analysis] mistakes a definition for a syllogism”, and offers no reason at all for what the Court has held. (Id., quoting Ely, The Wages of Crying Wolf: A Comment on Roe v. Wade, 82 Yale L.J. 920, 924 (1973] (footnotes omitted]).

In effect, the Supreme Court held that because there is no consensus as to when human life begins it can act as if it were proven that human life does not begin until birth so as to preserve to women the right to make their own decision whether an abortion takes a human life or not. It would make more sense to me if, in the face of uncertainty, any error made were side in favor of the fetus, which many believe to be human life.

The development of a zygote into a human child is a continual, progressive development. No one suggests that the born child is not a human being. It seems undeniable, however, that human life begins before birth. As Professor Curran states:

“[T]he fetus one day before birth and the child one day after birth are not that significantly or qualitatively different – in any respect; Even outside the womb the newborn child is not independent but remains greatly dependent on the mother and others. Birth in fact does not really tell much about the individual as such but only where the individual is--either outside the womb or still Inside the womb.’ (C. Curran, Transition and Tradition in Moral Theology, p. 209 (1919)). Similarly, viability does not mark the beginning of the truly human being.

[V]iability again indicates more about where the fetus can live than what it is. The fetus immediately before viability is not that qualitatively different from the viable fetus. In addition viability is a very inexact criterion because it is intimately connected with medical and scientific advances. In the future it might very well be possible for the fetus to live in an artificial womb or even with an artificial placenta from a very early stage in fetal development.

I join with those persons who believe that truly human life begins sometime between the second and third week after conception....<sup>22</sup>

---

22 Oops, there goes our claim that no American legal authority has established that “life begins” any later than fertilization. And yet we will not count this as a clear exception because (1) it sounds more like speculating out loud than a positive finding backed by evidence. And it is not an official ruling, but a dissent; (2) the distinction between “fertilization” and “2 or 3 weeks” has no impact on surgical or chemical abortions, although it could affect future restrictions on contraception; and (3) Dimond’s reasoning that there is no particular difference between pre or post viability applies equally to the lack of any qualitative difference between 3 weeks and fertilization.

A dissent by Justice Mahoney said

“Until the Court decides when a fetus is a person, I see no reason to deny the defense of necessity to those who believe that the fetus is viable and is a person...At least it would get the issue squarely before the U.S. Supreme Court...”
Detwiler v. Akron, C.A. No. 14385 at 22 (9th App. Dist. 1990)

Congress, Guardian of the 14th Amendment

18 USC §1841(d) ...the term “unborn child” means a child in utero, and the term “child in utero” or “child, who is in utero” means a member of the species homo sapiens, at any stage of development, who is carried in the womb.

Roe said the “penumbra” of the 14th Amendment<sup>23</sup> is what gives women the right to kill whatever that is in their wombs, although if it is ever “established” that what that is, is “recognizably human, or...a ‘person’...that is, infused with a ‘soul’...”,<sup>24</sup> then “of course” that same 14th Amendment must require states to protect those humans/persons by outlawing abortion.<sup>25</sup>

Congress was given the constitutional authority under Section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment to enforce by legislation the provisions of the 14th amendment. This is in addition to the SCOTUS-recognized authority of Congress to find facts. This authority certainly extends to defining whose rights the Amendment protects.

---

23 “The principal thrust of appellant’s [abortionist’s] attack on the Texas statutes [which had outlawed abortion] is that they improperly invade a right, said to be possessed by the pregnant woman, to choose to terminate her pregnancy. Appellant would discover this right in the concept of personal ‘liberty’ embodied in the Fourteenth Amendment’s Due Process Clause; or in personal, marital, familial, and sexual privacy said to be protected by the Bill of Rights or its penumbras,...” Roe, p. 129 (1973)

24 Roe v. Wade 410 U.S. 113, 133 (1973)

25 “If this suggestion of personhood [of unborn babies] is established, the...case [for legalizing aborticide], of course, collapses, for the fetus’ right to life is then guaranteed specifically by the [14th] Amendment.” Roe v. Wade, 410 US 113, 156

2004 was a banner year for personhood because not only was Congress the final category of court-recognized finders of facts to join the consensus, but Congress' authority to find facts is well regarded by SCOTUS,<sup>26</sup> and Congress is given authority by the 14th Amendment to clarify who merits its protection.

Congress' finding of this fact, that all unborn babies are humans "at all stages of gestation", is especially authoritative because Roe's trigger is "recognizably human", and Congress legally recognized unborn babies as human. No kind of recognition of a fact can satisfy a court's need better than formal, admissible, legal recognition of a fact.

American legal authorities are unanimous and undisputed. It is not possible for any fact to be any more legally recognized in America. If any "establishment" of this life-and-death fact can satisfy SCOTUS, this must, because no greater legal "establishment" of a fact is possible than the unanimous, undisputed concurrence of all court-recognized fact finders.

The fact that all unborn babies are humans/persons, triggering the legal obligation of states to protect their fundamental right to life, was "established" well before 2004. But Congress' vote makes it complete.

If the unanimous consensus of all five categories of court-recognized fact finders were not enough to "establish" a fact, it would be impossible for courts to establish any

---

26 ...the existence of facts supporting the legislative judgment is to be presumed...not to be pronounced unconstitutional unless in the light of the facts made known or generally assumed it is of such a character as to preclude the assumption that it rests upon some rational basis within the knowledge and experience of the legislators....the constitutionality of a statute predicated upon the existence of a particular state of facts may be challenged by showing to the court that those facts have ceased to exist. ...But by their very nature such inquiries, where the legislative judgment is drawn in question, must be restricted to the issue whether any state of facts either known or which could reasonably be assumed affords support for it. U.S. v. Carolene Products, 304 U.S. 144, 152 (1938)

fact.

Since courts obviously know many facts with far less consensus among fact finders, we must infer that courts can know “when life begins” now; and because Iowa’s defense turns on that fact, this court’s past “inability to speculate” is no longer an obstacle to resolving this issue.

It is impossible to legally recognize any fact with more certainty than the unanimous findings of all court-recognized categories of fact finders. Every court presented with these findings can now know that abortion is the legal equivalent of murder, and that our Constitution requires that Iowa criminalize it.

The dozens of appellate courts which have ruled, contrary to Roe, that Roe made all this overwhelming evidence irrelevant in abortion cases, are a long line of cases in which appeals courts have “decided an important federal question in a way that conflicts with relevant decisions of this Court”.<sup>27</sup>

The 18 USC §1841(c) Delusion

(“when [protectable] life begins” according to federal law)

18 U.S.C. § 1841

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to permit the prosecution...of any person for conduct relating to an abortion for which consent of the pregnant woman...has been obtained....

(d) As used in this section, the term “unborn child” means a child in utero, and the term “child in utero” or “child, who is in utero” means a member of the species homo sapiens, at any stage of development, who is carried in the womb.

§1841(c) doesn’t make unwanted babies less human. Although §1841(d) defines all unborn babies as humans, §1841(c) exempts abortion from the penalties of §1841(a), which seems to some to mitigate paragraph (d).

---

<sup>27</sup> Supreme Court rule 10c.

Roe similarly reasoned that lesser penalties for killing older unborn babies than for killing adults, and for killing younger unborn babies than for killing older unborn babies, showed that “the unborn have never been recognized in the law as persons in the whole sense”. Roe v. Wade 410 U.S. 113, 161

But law contains many dissimilar penalties for dissimilar situations, for many reasons, without any implication that people in less protected situations have less value or right to live than better protected people. Nor do people ordinarily argue that less than perfect protection proves those people are not “persons in the whole sense”.

For example, causing someone’s death is not “first degree murder” if it is proved to be an accident. No one thinks this “exception” proves the legislature thinks people killed accidentally are not “persons in the whole sense”.

§1841(d) is a categorical finding of fact. It establishes a fact. Laws, or their absence, do not change facts. §1841(c) says nothing about facts. It is only about penalties. Penalties do not alter facts, and facts are irregularly consulted when humans enact penalties.

The difference in treatment, then, requires some other explanation, than that loved babies are human while unwanted babies are tumors. There are many reasons penalties protect equally deserving citizens differently.

Sometimes the difference reflects the realities of the limitations of government in recognizing when citizens equally deserve rights. For example, a law student one week before taking his bar exam may be equally qualified with the lawyer who took it a week ago, but Courts are unable to recognize their equality until they actually take it and pass it.

Sometimes the difference is because of the difference in how criminal intent must be established. For example, no one says laws treat auto accident fatalities as less human than gunfight fatalities because drivers who kill with their cars are not penalized as greatly. The difference is one of intent, which is and should be an element of First Degree Murder.

Similarly, Roe may have misunderstood the point of Exodus 21:22 when Roe (in a footnote) gave the passage as a possible reason for treating unborn babies as not fully human. It says when a pregnant woman finds herself in the middle of a fight between two men, and gets hit, causing her child to go into labor, then if the child is unharmed, a jury shall set damages. This does not suggest the baby is less than human; but a jury can hear witnesses to establish how deliberate the punch to the womb appeared.

Sometimes the difference has nothing to do with merit, but with political reality. It would be absurd to conclude from repeal of prohibition, while marijuana criminalization increased, that drinking is “not legally recognizable as a harm”. Or even that it is less harmful than marijuana. The disparity simply reflects political reality, and nothing else.

The newspaper headlines and Congressional debate about Laci’s law (18 USC §1841(d)) proved beyond any reasonable doubt that the disparity of treatment of loved unborn babies, versus unwanted unborn babies, had nothing to do with a finding that a mother’s choice can make you less than human, and everything to do with politics.

To imagine any deeper significance in Laci’s Law’s disparate treatment would quickly lead to absurdity. To imagine the disparity was Congress’ choice, as opposed to the result of limitations beyond its control, would place Congress in a patently false, even absurd, and profoundly immoral theoretical position, where, to maintain any semblance of consistency when trying to explain the statute, it must concede that this statute implies that the right to life of an innocent human being depends purely on the choice of another. Congress would have to posit that the slaying of an unborn human child is a non-harm under United States law, provided solely that the child's mother wants the child dead.

18 USC § 1841(c) doesn't keep states from outlawing crime. The "abortion exception" clause states in relevant part

"1. Nothing in this section shall be construed to permit the prosecution: a. of any person for conduct relating to an abortion for which consent of the pregnant woman...has been obtained."

Some think these words somehow hinder states from defending their own laws against abortion. But nothing in §1841(c) hinders any state, or Congress itself later, from criminalizing anything. These words only say this U.S. Code section does not create penalties for consensual abortion. Yet. They do not mitigate 1841(d).

Reality does not adjust itself to whatever section of law you are reading. No matter what section of the U.S. Code you are reading at any time, all unborn babies remain "members of the species homo sapiens".

Even if Congress meant to bar states from outlawing consensual abortion, Congress has no such authority. States do not need Congress' permission to create penalties for crimes.

Neither does 18 U.S.C. §248 make anyone less human. §248 [F.A.C.E., Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances] restricts individuals from saving babies from abortionists. It does not restrict states from saving those same lives, any more than Roe v. Wade, which restricted states from saving those same lives, restricted individuals from saving those same lives. (Although most courts have erroneously assumed Roe did.)

The interaction of these laws and precedents may be illogical, but they are legal. Usually laws and precedents try to logically respond to relevant facts. So where they are premised on the facts being irrelevant, it should be no surprise when they are illogical.

A personhood challenge is ripe now that the facts are in

[A case is “ripe” when “nothing remains for the court but to render the appropriate judgment.” - Black’s Dictionary]

Iowa’s “personhood” challenge is not that of a single state. It is the challenge of the unanimous rulings of expert witnesses, state legislatures, judges, juries, and Congress.

Iowa’s constitutional obligation to criminalize abortion is demanded by unanimous American legal authority.

Rhode Island. Only one state previously challenged abortion’s legality with a criminalization of abortion. Doe v. Israel, 358 F. Supp. 1193 (1973). Doe v. Israel, 1 Cir., 1973, 482 F.2d 156. This Court declined to hear the case. Cert. denied, 416 U.S. 993.

Just weeks after Roe alleged uncertainty about the unborn because “the unborn have never been recognized in the law as persons in the whole sense”,<sup>28</sup> Rhode Island enacted that recognition.

The Rhode Island legislature apparently read the opinion of the Supreme Court in Roe v. Wade to leave open the question of when life begins and the constitutional consequences [**12] thereof. Doe v. Israel, 358 F. Supp. 1193, 1199 (1973)

Rhode Island “established” the fact more than Texas had, in the sense that the Rhode Island legislature and governor made official, in law, what Texas Attorney General Wade had only alleged in court as a fact understood by Texans without having to put it in a law.

District Judge Pettine didn’t just respond “well, that's a little more of the 'establishment' courts will need before we outlaw abortion again, but that's still not enough." He went far beyond SCOTUS, saying all the evidence in the world was irrelevant.

---

28 Roe v. Wade: 410 U.S. 113, 161

I neither summarize nor make any findings of fact as to their testimony [about whether unborn babies of human mothers are humans/persons]. To me the United States Supreme Court made it unmistakably clear that the question of when life [in fact] begins needed no resolution by the judiciary as it was not a question of fact. ... I find it all irrelevant.... Doe v. Israel, 358 F. Supp. 1193, 1197

If SCOTUS didn't treat Life as "a question of fact", but of law, how did doctors and preachers become more qualified to "answer" the "question" than SCOTUS?<sup>29</sup>

Roe said the court was "in no position to speculate as to the answer", not that the answer was irrelevant. Roe said the answer was not only relevant, it was dispositive: once "established", it must "of course" end legal abortion.

(Continued:) It is true that the Court in Wade and Bolton did not attempt to decide the point "when human life begins." No reading of the opinions, however, can be thought to empower the Rhode Island legislature to "defin[e] some creature as an unborn child, to be a human being and a person from the moment of its conception." Doe v. Israel

Since when does a state legislature need SCOTUS to "empower" them to establish facts? Normally courts respect findings of facts by legislatures.

(Continued:) Roe v. Wade and Doe v. Bolton can [not] be nullified by the simple device of a legislative declaration or presumptions contrary to the court's holding. Doe v. Israel

Except that Roe's holding was conditioned on no

---

<sup>29</sup> When those trained in the respective disciplines of medicine, philosophy, and theology are unable to arrive at any consensus, the judiciary, at this point in the development of man's knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the answer. Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 159 court-recognized legal authority establishing precisely the fact which Rhode Island established. And the Rhode Island legislature is a court-recognized finder of facts. The only thing Roe didn't clarify was how much establishment, by how many fact finders, was "enough" establishment to satisfy the court.

But now that issue is gone. There can be no more "establishment" than the uncontested consensus of every court-recognized fact finder in all five categories of court-recognized fact finders. If Roe was correct, that "establishment" was possible, then "establishment" has been accomplished.

SCOTUS never said "when life begins" was irrelevant, or that it was a question of law and not a question for fact finders, or that state legislatures are not court-recognized fact finders any longer. Therefore it was reasonable for Rhode Island to essentially ask SCOTUS, "is this enough more establishment for you to know those are babies?"

Roe had only said that the Texas Attorney General's assertion in court wasn't enough to establish that "life begins at conception", since his statement lacked the backing of even one state legislature in an explicit law. Which begs the question, what if two states affirm the claim? What if the second one, once informed that SCOTUS didn't already know it, affirms it with a crystal clear law enacted by its legislature and signed by its governor? Is that enough? It is enough. The issue is ripe.

The question remains unanswered. Cert denied.

Missouri. Before today, Rhode Island was the only state which placed that question squarely before the courts. Missouri almost did, 16 years later, but with no penalties for doing abortions. They even promised, in their otherwise strong personhood law, to obey SCOTUS, which let SCOTUS respond "we still don't need to decide."<sup>30</sup> SCOTUS heard Missouri's challenge only to point out that Missouri's challenge didn't actually prevent any abortions so it wasn't ripe for review.

---

<sup>30</sup> Webster v. Reproductive Health Services, 492 US 490 (1989) said the

Nor has any other SCOTUS ruling made any attempt to decide unborn personhood, or consider what triers of facts say about it, or even treat it as a a topic of interest.

At least the Webster ruling affirmed the definite possibility that a state's finding that "life begins at conception/fertilization" might be enough to satisfy SCOTUS that it is time for states to outlaw abortion.

Webster left the impression that when SCOTUS finally decides if one state's affirmation is enough, it could go either way.<sup>31</sup> Now 38 states concur with Missouri.

Was Roe's "collapse" clause nullified by Casey? What if Roe v. Wade is no longer what sustains abortion's legality? Did Planned Parenthood v. CASEY, 505 U.S. 833 (1992) say it no longer matters whether the unborn are humans/persons because Roe's rationale that "personhood is not established" has been replaced with "women rely on abortion now"?

Neither the opinion nor the dissent even mentioned Roe's "personhood is not established" rationale. No evidence of human life was presented, discussed, or rejected.

However, an unidentified "outer shell of Roe" was discussed.<sup>32</sup>

---

impact of a state's "personhood" law on Roe's "collapse" clause was not properly before the Court. The issue was not ripe. "...until... courts have applied the [personhood] preamble to restrict appellees' [abortionists] activities in some concrete way, it is inappropriate for federal courts to address its meaning."

31 Sandra Day O'Conner concurred: "This Court refrains from deciding constitutional questions where there is no need to do so.... When the constitutional invalidity of a State's abortion statute actually turns upon the constitutional validity of Roe, there will be time enough to reexamine Roe, and to do so carefully." (Quoting from the syllabus.)

32 "The joint opinion, following its newly minted variation on stare decisis, retains the outer shell of Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113 (1973), but beats a wholesale retreat from the substance of that case.... Roe continues to exist, but only in the way a storefront on a western

Iowa submits “personhood is not established” is that “shell” upon which legal abortion continues to “hang”, and without which any new rationale must “collapse”.

To say a thing “hangs” on another thing is to suggest that without the other thing, the thing would “collapse”. So whatever still sustains abortion’s legality must still be subject to Roe’s “collapse” clause.

A dissent in Casey identifies “the whole argument”:

The whole argument of abortion opponents is that what the Court calls the fetus and what others call the unborn child is a human life. Thus, whatever answer Roe came up with after conducting its “balancing” [between women’s “privacy” and “potential life”] is bound to be wrong, unless it is correct that the human fetus is in some critical sense merely potentially human. Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 982 (1992) (Concurrence/dissent of Scalia, White, Thomas)

Whether I am human: a value judgment?

This dissent correctly dismisses any validity in deciding Life “as a matter of law”, but neither does this dissent consider the possibility of establishing unborn personhood as fact. Which leaves a personal “value judgment” – a subjective judgment made independently of law or fact.

There is, of course, no way to determine [whether the unborn are human] as a legal matter; it is, in fact, a value judgment. Some societies have considered newborn children not yet human, or the incompetent elderly no longer so. (Ibid, following paragraph)

Whether I am a human being is a “value judgment”?
Not a question for fact finders but for policy makers?

Would we be any safer if our lives depended on whether decision makers “value” us, than if our humanity is “legally recognized”?

Only one thing holds up Roe, Casey, and all in movie set exists: a mere facade to give the illusion of reality.”

---

Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 945, 954 (1992)
(Concurrence/dissent of Rehnquist, White, Scalia, Thomas)

between: alleged uncertainty whether unborn babies of human mothers are (in fact) humans. Smash that “shell” with legally recognized certainty that the unborn are human, and “reliance interests” must fall. Once abortion is “established” as killing innocent people, “women’s schedules” are left a barbarically trivial excuse for it.

Even Justices Scalia and Thomas, noting the life-and-death importance of the question in their dissents, avoid affirming their own certainty that the unborn are humans/persons, or even that the question can be objectively resolved. Nor do they acknowledge the growing evidence that unborn babies of human mothers are humans.

Taking no position as SCOTUS justices is consistent with their theory that the right to kill babies is a “value judgment”<sup>33</sup> for states. The logical difficulty with that approach is that that “value judgment” won’t be surrendered to states as long as SCOTUS’ official inability to tell “when life begins” remains unchallenged, leaving the rights of the unborn less clear than the allegedly constitutional “woman’s right to choose”. (For more about “reliance interests”, see Appendix G, #1.)

“There is, of course, no way to determine [whether the unborn are human] as a legal matter....” said the most conservative Supreme Court justice in 1990. Now that every American legal authority which has taken a position on “when [protectable] life begins” has ruled that it begins at fertilization/conception, the question is ripe to determine the fact as a legal matter.

Partial Birth. As late as Stenberg v. Carhart 530 U.S. 914, 920-921 (2000) SCOTUS still did not address whether the unborn are in fact humans/persons. It dismissed the belief “that life begins at conception and consequently that an abortion [causes] the death of an innocent child” as a “point of view” which is “irreconcilable” with, and apparently canceled by, the “view” that murder is OK.

---

<sup>33</sup> Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 982 (1992)
(Concurrence/dissent of Scalia, White, Thomas)

As for Roe’s “speculation” whether abortion kills baby humans, or whether the babies that women are used to killing according to Casey are humans, “We shall not visit these legal principles.”

Even Stenberg’s dissents avoid a position. Whether the unborn are “human life or [merely] potential human life” is “depending on one’s view”.<sup>34</sup> It “dehumanizes the fetus and trivializes human life”, not because it takes human life, but because it “approaches infanticide”.<sup>35</sup> Whether to save lives “is a value judgment, dependent upon how much one respects (or believes society ought to respect)...life....”<sup>36</sup>

Is it only sophistry to claim what Scalia and Thomas would not, that the consensus of all court-recognized fact finders represents something more objective than a “value judgment”?

It may be conceded that when many of those fact-finding authorities made their determination, they did not explain their reasons. However, thousands of expert witnesses, and a few judges, did. And many reasons are given in the record of legislative debates. Thousands more would be more readily available in court records had courts shown any interest in the evidence.

Iowa’s reasons to outlaw abortion. Iowa’s Simple Resolution includes these reasons offered by the Iowa legislature for joining the consensus of all other court-recognized fact finders that constitutionally protected “life begins” at fertilization:

1. There is no nonarbitrary line between birth and

---

34 Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914, 980 Dissent by Thomas, Rehnquist, Scalia.

35 Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914, 1006 Dissent by Thomas.

36 Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914, 954 Dissent by Scalia conception distinguishing “humans/persons” from “nonpersons”.

2. Without such a line, there can be no stage of gestation at which the deliberate killing of a baby can be objectively distinguished from murder.

3. The failure of some adults to grasp the humanity of babies at any given stage is a dangerous basis for permitting killing, since as many adults fail to grasp the full humanity of quite a number of discrete groups of born persons.

4. The capacity to choose between good and evil – to choose to behave either as an angel or as a demon – is a capacity that distinguishes humans from animals. It is not related to brain size, since animals with much larger brains lack this capacity, while babies with much smaller than adult brains demonstrate this capacity. No known physical process accounts for this ability, supporting the belief articulated in Roe v. Wade that a human body is “infused with a soul”.

5. Luke 1 says John, at 6 months’ gestation, leaped for joy at the sound of a righteous voice, which shows capacity to prefer good over evil, three months before birth.

But to whatever extent the objectivity of “life begins at conception” may be limited by the incompleteness of knowledge available to humans, the fact remains that all five categories of court-recognized finders of facts have “established” the fact, while no American legal authority has said it begins any later, including SCOTUS.

Therefore to whatever extent any heart fails to emotionally recognize the unborn as human, or any brain fails to intellectually recognize the unborn as human, there is no denying the legal recognizability of the unborn as humans/persons.

Roe’s “Collapse”.

“If this suggestion of personhood [of unborn babies] is established, the...case [for legalizing aborticide], of course, collapses, for the fetus’ right to life is then guaranteed specifically by the [14th] Amendment.” Roe v. Wade, 410 US

This short “collapse” clause tells us five things:

(1) “Collapse” is possible. “Establishment” of the unborn as humans/persons, to an extent that SCOTUS will legally recognize it, is possible, and will transfer “constitutional protection” from people who kill babies to babies. Roe did not rule that unborn personhood could never be established by any other authority than itself. Roe’s “if” explicitly acknowledges both the possibility, and Roe’s own uncertainty whether it would happen.

(2) Authority greater than SCOTUS? The unspecified authority/agency of this “establishment” is not SCOTUS. Some other authority is better able or more qualified, than SCOTUS, to “establish” personhood in a way that could “collapse” the case for legal abortion.

Since there can be no greater legal authority than SCOTUS, this can only mean an authority over facts, an area where SCOTUS does indeed routinely defer to fact-finders as having superior authority.

It may be supposed that an amendment to the Constitution is what the Roe justices were thinking of as an authority superior to that of SCOTUS.

Well, maybe. But there is something about an amendment to the Constitution establishing unborn personhood that argues against it being thought of by the Roe justices, because it argues against its appropriateness to address abortion: no other Constitutional Amendment has attempted to establish a fact as true, as a matter of law.

It is therefore hard to imagine that a Constitutional Amendment can have greater power to establish the fact that all unborn babies are humans/persons, than today’s consensus of court-recognized fact finders that we already have.

(3) Authority less in doubt than SCOTUS? What must be “established” must be a fact question about which it is possible for the Roe court to be in doubt – not a question of American law, upon which SCOTUS is the world’s expert and cannot possibly be in doubt.<sup>37</sup>

(4) Evidence is welcome. Fact finders (ie. juries, legislatures, or expert witnesses) are invited to “establish” this fact if they can – SCOTUS’ alleged ignorance cannot rationally or legally be made an obstacle to letting fact finders “establish” this fact - although we are not told which of them, or how many of them, must agree before SCOTUS will consider the fact established “enough”.

(5) As ignorance passes, so must abortion. Abortion’s legality and aura of “constitutional protection” can continue only in the absence of this “establishment” – only as long as uncertainty is alleged whether the unborn babies of human mothers are humans.

Roe’s “of course” acknowledges that it is obvious that abortion’s legality cannot survive knowing it is murder. That is, alleged ignorance cannot rationally or legally be made an obstacle to letting fact finders “establish” this fact. If there is evidence, it must be heard. Because it is unthinkable that we would knowingly want the blood of innocent human lives on our hands. So if the babies of human mothers turn out to be humans, we need to protect them.

Many abortion supporters hope, and proliferators fear<sup>38</sup>, that even after our nation’s laws and courts officially acknowledge that abortion is the legal equivalent of murder – that the babies abortion kills are humans/persons, it will be possible, even likely, for other rationales to replace Roe’s

---

37 “We need not resolve the difficult question of when life begins. When those trained in the respective disciplines of medicine, philosophy, and theology are unable to arrive at any consensus, the judiciary, at this point in the development of man's knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the answer.” Roe v. Wade 410 US 113, 159 Roe would not defer to doctors and preachers as their superiors on a question of law!

38 A leader of this fear is Clark Forsythe:

<http://www.saltshaker.us/SLIC/AULmissingOpportunity.pdf>

rationale – Roe’s official ignorance about “when life begins”.

Appendix G deals with some of them inside and outside case law and shows this is simply impossible. It is just as obvious today as when Roe’s “collapse” clause began with “of course”, that SCOTUS can’t decide who lives and dies as a question so exclusively of law as to render irrelevant whether SCOTUS’ rulings protect murder.

The 14th Amendment “equal protection of the laws” is for all who are in fact humans/persons. Had it been only for those who are legally recognized as human, we could still have slavery simply by declining to legally recognize a discrete class of people as fully human.

All that pro-slavery judges would need to do would be to rule that blacks are only 3/5 human according to the Constitution. Or that immigrants, already treated as less than “persons in the whole sense” by classifying people as “illegals” for a variety of circumstances beyond their control, for which they are therefore not culpable<sup>39</sup> yet may still be prosecuted. So because “they were never treated by our laws as persons in the whole sense”, they may be enslaved, we might then reason.

All “humans” are “persons”

Abortion debate is clouded by the legalistic claim that 18 USC §1841(d) doesn’t trigger Roe’s “collapse” clause because it uses a different word for unborn baby: the former says “homo sapiens” and the latter says “persons”. However, not only are the terms equated in the definitions of the U.S. Code and in all SCOTUS precedent, but Roe v. Wade itself acknowledges that babies who are “recognizably human” are “persons”.

The confusion involves the statement in Roe that “the word ‘person’, as used in the Fourteenth Amendment, does not include the unborn.” Roe, 410 U.S. at 156-157. Courts below interpret that as meaning that even if unborn babies are in fact human beings, they are not “persons” as a matter of law, so therefore, evidence that unborn babies of humans are in fact humans is irrelevant.

---

<sup>39</sup> For example, children brought here by parents are not culpable for being here. Immigrants are not culpable for visa overstays that exist only because the USCIS took years longer to process simple and legitimate application forms than anyone expected.

That interpretation of Roe ignores Roe’s equation of “person” and “recognizably human”.

These disciplines variously approached the question [of when life begins] in terms of the point at which the embryo or fetus became ‘formed’ or recognizably human, or in terms of when a ‘person’ came into being, that is, infused with a ‘soul’... Roe v. Wade 410 U.S. 113, 133 (1973)

An interpretation of Roe consistent with both Roe’s stated inability to “speculate” and Roe’s equation of “person” with “recognizably human” is that Roe did not mean there is such a thing as a human being who is not a “‘person’, as used in the Fourteenth Amendment”, but only that SCOTUS’ inability to “speculate” was whether unborn babies are “recognizably human” when they are very tiny, at which point Dorland’s medical charts (2nd paragraph in Roe after the “‘person’...does not include the unborn” quote) portray human and pig embryos as identical, 35 years before the first human chromosome was decoded.<sup>40</sup>

Roe neither said the fact is irrelevant, nor that there is such a thing as a human being who is not a “‘person’, as used in the Fourteenth Amendment”. Roe equates “person” and “recognizably human”.

Therefore the expectation for this section is that it will not say what SCOTUS does not already affirm, but will be a double check against a legalistic distinction between “humans” and “persons” rising from courts below.

---

40 P. 479 of Dorland’s Illustrated Medical Dictionary - 24th edition, published 1965, has an illustration of embryos of a hog, calf, rabbit, and human side by side. It portrays the four as indistinguishable until about a human’s third month. The illustration is attributed to Haeckel, who a century earlier confessed to his fraud in manipulating the images of the human by (1) adding gills, (2) redrawing the eye, (3) making the back twice as long proportionately, (4) shortening the head, (5) removed the arms and legs. See Appendix J.

The U.S. Code equates “humans” and “persons” from birth. It avoids a position on the legal rights of preborn babies, but a distinction between “humans” and “persons” has no precedent in the U.S. Code.

1 U.S.C. 1 §8. “Person”, “human being”, “child”, and “individual” as including born-alive infant

(a) In determining the meaning of any Act of Congress, or of any ruling, regulation, or interpretation of the various administrative bureaus and agencies of the United States, the words “person”, “human being”, “child”, and “individual” shall include every infant member of the species homo sapiens who is born alive at any stage of development....

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to affirm, deny, expand, or contract any legal status or legal right applicable to any member of the species homo sapiens at any point prior to being “born alive” as defined in this section.

“Persons” in the Constitution and Declaration.

The 5th and 14th Amendments say “[n]o person shall be deprived of life...without due process of law” and “[no] State shall. . . deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law”. The word “person” must be taken in these protections to include all human beings,<sup>41</sup> or no human being – no matter how educated or useful – can be safe from arbitrary exclusion from them by hearts hardened against recognizing in others the value they want recognized in themselves. When communism sweeps across nations the “useless eaters” targeted for eradication include the most useful – doctors, public servants, teachers.

This amendment secures protection for the basic, minimum human rights any state must respect. It is imperative that categories of human beings not be read out of the terms of this amendment without the clearest demonstration of justification for such exceptions.

---

41 The following section on the unborn being humans borrows from a widely circulated brief by Cliff Zarzky. His contact information: Clifford L. Zarsky, JD, Texas Bar 22250000, 5202 Wooldridge, Corpus Christi, Texas 78413. Telephone: home office 361- 991-7465 Cell phone 361-765-1461 Fax: 361-993-9339.

Precedents equating “person” with “human”. If there is any term whose broad scope demands unconditional respect, It is the term “person.” For whoever is not a person lacks not only the privileges of citizenship, but even minimum human rights and is no better off than property, entirely subject to the whim of the owner and whatever regulations the state may impose.

It is as dangerous to drive any invidious [unwanted, annoying, irritating] class of human beings out from under the term “persons” in the 5th and 14th Amendments, as it is to read them out from under the term “men” in the legal foundation of our Constitution: the Declaration of Independence, which says:

“all men are created equal, and are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, among which are life...”

A legalistically narrow reading of “men” designed to exclude any human beings who are not “men” from this acknowledgment of God-given rights would not stop with babies, but would include children and women in its sweep. Obviously such a reading occurred to none of its authors. The absurdity of this result proves that “all human beings” are the meaning of the term “men” in this clause. It would be just as absurd to think not all human beings are meant by “persons” as used by a government founded on this declaration of rights. That our government was founded on this declaration is stated by this Court in U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92,U.S. 542, 553 (1875):

The rights of life and personal liberty are natural rights of man. “To secure these rights,” says the Declaration of Independence, “governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.”

This opinion continues by noting the obligation of states to secure these rights:

The very highest duty of the States, when they entered into the Union under the Constitution, was to protect all persons within their boundaries in the enjoyment of these “unalienable rights with which they were endowed by their Creator.” Sovereignty, for this purpose, rests alone with the States.

The very idea of freedom presupposes some objective moral law which overarches rulers and ruled alike. Subjectivism about human value is eternally incompatible with democracy. We and our rulers are of one kind only so long as we are subject to one law. But if there is no “law of nature”, the ethos of any society is the creation of its rulers, educators, and conditioners; and every creator stands above and outside his own creation, so unless we hold to the objective values stated in the Declaration, we will perish. “The laws of nature and of nature’s God” contain no value distinctions between one invidious class of humans and another.

Abortion precedents. In Steinberg v. Brown 321 F. Supp. 741 (N.D. Ohio, 1970) the federal district court rejected a challenge to Ohio’s laws against abortion. It treated an “embryo of a a fetus” as having a right to life which no abortionist or mother had any right to remove. It said the implied right to privacy ...must inevitably fall in conflict with the express provisions of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments that no person shall be deprived of life without due process of law. The difference between this case and Griswold [the Supreme Court decision that legalized contraceptives] is clearly apparent, for here [in this case] there is an embryo of a fetus incapable of protecting itself. There, [in Griswold] the only lives were those of two competent adults. Id. 745-46.

This case is acknowledged in Roe, at 155, where no error is identified in it. Seven more such cases are acknowledged in the same paragraph of Roe. It is unclear why Roe, after addressing this case and several others cited below, said “no case could be cited that holds that a fetus is a person within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment”.

Biologically, when the spermatozoon penetrates and fertilizes the ovum, the result is the creation of a new organism which conforms to the definition of life just given. ... Thus when a new life comes into being with the union of human egg and sperm cells, it may terminate, or be terminated, at any moment after it commences, and before, at, or after the particular developmental process called birth” takes place. Such terms as “quick” or “viable”, which are frequently encountered in legal discussion, are scientifically imprecise and without recognized medical meaning, and hence irrelevant to the problem here presented. Id at 746, and “[o]nce human life has commenced, the constitutional protections found in the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments impose upon the state a duty of safeguarding it.” Steinberg v. Brown, Id 746-47.

This case says so precisely what Roe says that “no case” says, that we would expect Roe to have to expose something fundamentally erroneous about it to put it in the category of not being a case. Roe identified no such error.

Gray v. State, 77 Tex Cr. R. 221 (1915), involves the review of Gray’s indictment for the abortion of Sadie Moore’s child. Though the indictment was tested to see if it complied with state statutes, the court examined the common law before doing so (and affirming the conviction) and said most states held abortion can be criminally prosecuted any time after conception. This case was also mentioned in Roe, in footnote 27, with several other cases. But it is listed as supporting a statement which seems quite different than how we have just summarized it:

...most American courts ruled, in holding or dictum, that abortion of an unquickened fetus was not criminal under their received common law, 27... (emphasis added)

SCOTUS’ “Personhood” Test: “humans, live, and have their being”. There is no doubt that citizens of hostile nations, children under eighteen, convicted, comatose or mentally disabled individuals are each a class of persons. This is so, not because members of each class can prove their inclusion under the fourteenth amendment, but because they are included by virtue of their humanity. They are “humans, live, and have their being.”

We start from the premise that illegitimate children are not “nonpersons.” They are humans, live, and have their being... They are clearly “persons” within the meaning of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Levi v. Louisiana, 391 U.S. 68, 70 (1968) (discussing illegitimate children).

“Humans, live, and have their being” is a biological test, and a very simple, fundamental one for doctors today.

There are two simple ways to determine whether a creature is “human”: one is to check its DNA – an option of course not available in 1973. An even simpler way is to see if the creature is living inside the womb of a human.

SCOTUS’ test of personhood is a “biologic” test. Glon v. American Guarantee and Liability Inc. Co. 391 U.S. 73, 75 (1968). Any entity possessing those factors are clearly “persons” within the meaning of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

To say that the test of equal protection should be the "legal" rather than the biological relationship is to avoid the issue. For the Equal Protection Clause necessarily limits the authority of a State to draw such "legal" lines as it chooses.

The Court held illegitimate children are clearly ‘persons’ because they are “human, live and have their being.” These are all biological qualifications that the Court acknowledged and accepted that the illegitimate children possessed without any facts presented or questions asked by the Court. Why did the Levi Court hold the illegitimate children were clearly ‘persons’? No proof of any kind was required. It was self evident truth to the Levi Court.

In what way are unborn children not “human, live and have their being”? There is no reference to the Levi case in Roe, but Levi has not been reversed, and therefore must be presumed to be the Supreme Court test for “personhood.”

The Levi Court did not refer to any evidence presented for the children, so it is apparent they accepted as judicial knowledge that the children were “human beings, live, and had their being” and the same judicial knowledge should apply to all classes of human beings including the class of unborn humans. Especially since Congress’ “establishment” of the fact that all unborn babies are humans, in 2004.

At present the only approved test for “personhood” by the Supreme Court is “human, live and have their being,” Therefore, “[t]hey are clearly ‘persons’ within the meaning of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.” Id. Human offspring conceived but not yet born are likewise “humans, live and have their being.”

Justice White joined by Rehnquist, CJ, in a dissent, explains more clearly the genetic and biologic test of the Levi Court:

However one answers the metaphysical or theological question whether the fetus is a human “human being” or the legal question whether it is a “person” as is used in the Constitution, it must be at least recognized first, that the fetus is an entity that bears in its cell all the genetic information that characterizes a member of the species homo sapiens, and distinguishes an individual member of that species from all others, and second, that there is no nonarbitrary line separating a fetus from a child or indeed from an adult human being. Thornburgh v. American College of Obstets., & Gyne. 476 U.S. 774, 792 (1986)

They are “a form of human life,” Webster v. Reproductive Health Servs. 492 U.S. 490, 520 (1989)

(plurality opinion), as are infants, toddlers, teens, adults, and the elderly. They do not need to overcome any additional hurdle in order to establish their right to presumptive inclusion within the term “person” as used in the Constitution, and there is no justification for the arbitrary exclusion of such children from the protection of basic human rights under the Constitution.

Direct statements that all “humans” are “persons”. In United States v. Palme, 14-17 U.S. 607, (1818), Chief Justice John Marshall stated, “The words ‘any person or persons,’ are broad enough to comprehend every human being.”

Justice Stephen Field stated in Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U.S.228, 242 (1896), “The term ‘person’ is broad enough to include any and every human being within the jurisdiction of the republic...This has been decided so often that the point does not require argument.”

In 1971 an action was maintained on behalf of a stillborn child.

The increasing weight of authority supports the proposition that a viable unborn child, which would have been born alive but for the negligence of defendant, is a ‘person’ within the meaning of the wrongful death statute. Simmons v. Howard University D.C. Cir. 323 F. Supp. 529 (1971)

This was the kind of case Roe dismissed with:

In a recent development, generally opposed by the commentators, some States permit the parents of a stillborn child to maintain an action for wrongful death because of prenatal injuries. 65 Such an action, however, would appear to be one to vindicate the parents' interest and is thus consistent with the view that the fetus, at most, represents only the potentiality of life. Roe at 162.

But if that Court saw no human worth in the stillborn child apart from “the parents’ interest”, wouldn’t that be the same “interest” the law would have, had another’s negligence killed a fine horse or dog?

It is hardly necessary, to vindicate a plaintiff's "interest", to classify the thing or creature destroyed as a "person" if it is in fact not.

There was no reason for the Court to call the baby a "person" if the Court did not in fact believe the baby was.

Probate. [when an inheritance is left to an unborn baby] No one, not even Roe, denies that the unborn are "persons" in probate law.

The preamble [of Missouri's personhood law] does not, by its terms, regulate abortions or any other aspect of appellees' medical practice, and § 1.205.2 can be interpreted to do no more than offer protections to unborn children in tort and probate law, which is permissible under Roe v. Wade, supra, at 161-162. Webster v. Reproductive Health Services (492 U.S. 490, 491), 1989.

The Texas Supreme Court agreed with Lord Hardwicke,

...that a child in the mother's womb is a person in rerum natura, [in the nature of things] and that by rules of the civil and common law "she [the child] was to all intents and purposes a child. . . and is to be considered as living for all purposes. Nelson v. Galveston, 14 S.W. 1021 (1890)

The court ruled that a posthumous child may recover damages for the father's death. The case is not mentioned in Roe. "She was to all intents and purposes a child" certainly says, directly, that this finding of fact is not limited to probate, but would have been considered by SCOTUS as just as true in any 5th or 14th Amendment case.

It would appear to undermine Roe's statement that "...no case could be cited that holds that a fetus is a person within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment...."

Here is how Roe justified acknowledging "personhood" of the unborn only in probate but not in other law – as if broad assertions of unborn personhood throughout all case law did not exist:

Such an action, however, would appear to be one to vindicate the parents' interest and is thus consistent with the view that the fetus, at most, represents only the potentiality of life. Similarly, unborn children have been recognized as acquiring rights or interests by way of inheritance or other devolution of property, and have been represented by guardians ad litem. 66 Perfection of the interests involved, again, has generally been contingent upon live birth. In short, the unborn have never been recognized in the law as persons in the whole sense. Roe at 162.

Guardian ad litem (lawyers) for the unborn. But is there not an internal inconsistency in the preceding logic? If the rights of the unborn are only at the mercy of the testator's (the person who left the will) interest, why isn't the lawyer for the testator, hired by the executor appointed by the testator, to represent the interests of the testator, the best representation for that interest? What legal purpose is served by a guardian ad litem for the baby, if the baby has no protectable interest of his own independent of the testator's?

There is no reason to appoint a guardian ad litem for the unborn, by a court which considers the beneficiary to have no greater legally protectable rights than those wished by the testator; such as in a will for the maintenance of a dog. No court has appointed a guardian ad litem to represent the interests of a dog. At least we hope not.<sup>42</sup>

We are unsure of what significance Blackmun found in saying "Perfection of the interests involved, again, has generally been contingent upon live birth", since the death of a plaintiff in any lawsuit ordinarily eliminates his claim. How do courts of equity treat adults differently than unborn babies, in that regard?

---

<sup>42</sup> Apparently a judge's ruling April 21, 2015 is the closest any court has come to regarding animals as "persons". The judge allowed guardian ad litem to represent two chimpanzees in a habeas corpus proceeding, implying their status as "persons". www.theguardian.com/world/2015/apr/21/chimpanzees-granted-legal-persons-status-unlawful-imprisonment. Here is a 2002 article about the push for guardian ad litem to represent animals: www.proaviculture.com/guardian.htm. Here is a 2011 push: www.bradenton.com/2011/05/24/3218278/animals-to-get-guardians-in-court.html

McArthur v. Scott, not mentioned in Roe, said preborn children in the womb should not have been cut out of a probated will without proper representation in court.

“A decree annulling the probate of a will is not merely irregular and erroneous but absolutely void, as against [unborn] persons interested in [who are beneficiaries of] the will and not parties to the decree, [who had no opportunity to defend their interests in the court hearing] and as the parties these plaintiffs were neither actually nor constructively parties to the decree setting aside the will of their grandfather, it follows that that decree is no bar to the [can't keep them from] assertion of their rights under the will.”
McArthur v. Scott, 113 US 340, 440 (1885)

This Court said a person must have the opportunity to present their side of the story in court. Id. 387, 391.

If it be argued that the plaintiffs are “persons” with representation rights only since their birth, this Court also held that preborn persons in the womb can hold vested [not just potential or expected, but fully realized] rights, not just rights “contingent upon live birth,” id. 384.

...it has long been a settled rule of construction in the courts of England and America that estates, legal or equitable, given by will, should always be regarded as vesting immediately, unless the testator has by very clear words manifested an intention that they should be contingent upon a future event.

Not only does McArthur v. Scott join those cases which would counter Roe's claim that “no case could be cited that holds that a fetus is a person within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment”, but its ruling would likely have significantly impacted Roe had not the lower courts in Roe denied a motion for a guardian ad litem to join in the arguments. Roe, Doe v. Scott, 321 F. Supp. 1385 (N.D. III.

1971), cert denied 409 U.S. 817 (1972).

The Fifth Amendment provides “no person shall be ... deprived of life...without due process of law.” As a fetus is a person, neither a state nor the federal government may allow anyone to take innocent life without due process of law. Especially now that federal law defines every unborn baby “at all stages of gestation” as a human life, it has the right to representation to be heard on the question as to whether its life should be terminated. And every court ruling affecting their fundamental rights, in which they are not allowed representation, is null and void according to McArthur. Roe definitely affects the fundamental rights of unborn babies, some of whom are definitely impacted by a ruling protecting their killers, and those babies were definitely denied representation in that ruling.

The Judgments of the U.S. District Court and the Supreme Court in Roe, rendered without any representation of such victims by guardian or next friend (or by counsel for such guardian or next friend), constituted deprivation of life, liberty and property without due process of law, in violation of the 5th Amendment. Accordingly, such Judgments are unconstitutional and void with regard to them. McArthur v. Scott, 113 U.S, 340, 391-392, 404 (1885) (unborn children); Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S.714,733-734 (1878) (U.S. citizens).

Neither the Supreme Court in Roe nor the U.S. District Court below had personal jurisdiction over any category of children affected vitally by those proceedings, who had a right to be represented before the Courts.

Unborn baby’s interest greater than mother’s interest. Raleigh Fitkin-Paul Morgan Memorial Hospital v Anderson 201 A.2d 537,538 (N.J. 1964) held that the interest of the unborn child was greater than the interest of the mother. This is contrary to Roe’s contention that unborn babies have no protectable rights better established than whatever rights the mother chooses to grant.

The mother, a Jehovah's Witness, refused consent to any future blood transfusions which her hospital had advised will probably be necessary to save her and her baby. The hospital sued to require a transfusion if her doctor determines it is necessary, and a unanimous state Supreme Court agreed.

This doesn't technically contradict the verbiage of Roe, which supposedly allows states to restrict 3rd trimester abortions. But it certainly contradicts the jurisprudence since Roe, which throws impossible obstacles before states trying to restrain killing an unborn baby up to the moment of delivery and in some cases after, so long as the mother so chooses. Even the partial birth restriction, Gonzales v. Carhart, 550 U.S. 124 (2007), restricts only one method of abortion up to the moment of live delivery.

Corporations. The Supreme Court has applied the term "person" so broadly that it includes legal fictions. The fictitious entity of a corporation is a "person" meriting Fourteenth Amendment equal protection, Santa Clara County v. Southern Pacific Railroad Company, 118 U.S. 394 (1886) and for due process protection in Minneapolis and St. Louis Railway Co. Beckwith, 129 U.S. 26 (1889).

Can the 14th Amendment give "equal protection" to legal arrangements with real people, but not real babies from other real people? These cases stand for nothing if they do not stand for the principle that the word "person" in the fourteenth amendment is not to be construed in a strict or narrow sense.

Nothing in the constitution suggests fictional legal entities should be included as persons for constitutional protection. By contrast, unborn humans are specifically referred to in the Preamble of the Constitution as a purpose of the Constitution: ". . . (to) secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity...." Presently living unborn humans are unquestionably posterity. There can be no pretense of consistency unless and until this Court holds either that a corporation is not a person or that an unborn human child is.

Executions of pregnant women. Women on death row can't be executed while they are pregnant, according to 400 years of U.S. law.

The writ de ventre inspiciendo ["to inspect the body"], to ascertain whether a woman convicted of a capital crime was quick with child, was allowed by the common law, in order to guard against the taking of the life of an unborn child for the crime of the mother. Union Pacific R. Co. v Botsford, 141 U.S. 250, 253 (1891).

The prohibition was codified in the U.S. Code in 1994 (if not before) by HR3355. It now reads:

18 U.S.C. §3596 (b) Pregnant Woman. A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a woman while she is pregnant.

Blackmun might have seen, in the 1891 case just cited, confirmation of his theory that our ancestors didn't attach as much human worth to first trimester babies (which in his mind was the same as babies before quickening) since in the common law the protection didn't kick in before quickening. (When the baby's kicks can be felt by someone holding their hand on the mother's womb.) But the quickening trigger was obviously necessitated by prosecutorial necessity, regardless of what anyone thought about the value of preemies. Quickening was the only pregnancy test they had in those days, with which a warden could verify a prisoner's claim. Before delaying an execution they would of course want proof that the woman was pregnant rather than just take her word for it that she craves pickles and ice cream. Without a proof requirement, any woman would make the claim – even though no woman could really be sure either – to buy a few more months.

The codification of this prohibition changes “quick with child” to “pregnant”. In other words, current law stops the execution as soon as the woman tests positive, which is as close as modern science can get to the time of conception.

Surely prosecutorial considerations explain other common law distinctions in penalties before and after quickening, too. Before quickening, prosecutors had no evidence that there was a live human being who was killed, not to mention the absence of a dead body to document death. The situation was the legal equivalent of attempted murder, where even if the attempt can be proved, the existence of a victim cannot be. Perhaps rather it was the legal equivalent of the kinds of contraception today which kill after fertilization; where not even the mother knows if there was ever a fertilization, or if fertilization was prevented or the embryo was killed after fertilization.

Slavery & abortion were outlawed together.

There was a concurrence of 14th Amendment ratification and stronger criminalization of abortion before quickening. Despite the prosecutorial hurdle, states passed stronger penalties against pre-quickening abortion, during the same time that they ratified the 14th Amendment.

As Roe reports, this tightening of penalties by almost all states was in response to lobbying of The American Medical Association, which had been assembling evidence of distinct, unique human life from the moment of conception.

The fact that almost all states tightened their penalties from conception in response to evidence of human individuality from that point, proves that states adopted the position, if they didn't already hold it but had withheld penalties because of courtroom reality, that all babies from conception are humans/persons. The fact that they simultaneously ratified the 14th Amendment with its "equal protection of the laws" clause protecting all humans/persons and invalidating any law that gives less protection to humans of any invidious class through some legal fiction, indicates that they believed the 14th Amendment obligated states to protect the unborn.

The purpose of the 14th amendment was to close a loophole in the 13th that had allowed slavery to continue. In other words the national consciousness that increasingly protected unborn babies at all stages of gestation was the same national consciousness that was nailing down slavery's coffin.

Stare Decisis*, the principle, carried back centuries. By reasoning similar to that of Stare Decisis, Roe dismisses the reforms of post-slavery because they are so recent, having occurred a mere century before.<sup>43</sup> Roe argued that more ancient understanding of “when life begins” is a better guide for us today, than the popular understanding that grew in response to the newly discovered facts circulated by the American Medical Association.<sup>44</sup>

The past 50 years have seen a second explosion of knowledge of the nature of human life from fertilization to birth. Now that Americans know, we shouldn't be expected to tolerate abortion until that knowledge is lost again.

Unfortunately, knowledge is not directly proportional to behavior. The national acceptance of AMA's facts a century before Roe coincided with the maturing respect for all human life forced by the Civil War over slavery. National acceptance of facts about blacks presented before the War could have ended slavery without war. Today, political positions are formed not by disagreement over medical facts, but by personal responses to them.

Roe treats the maturing understanding of the AMA of

---

43 “It perhaps is not generally appreciated that the restrictive criminal abortion laws in effect in a majority of States today are of relatively recent vintage. Those laws, generally proscribing abortion or its attempt at any time during pregnancy except when necessary to preserve the pregnant woman's life, are not of ancient or even of common-law origin. Instead, they derive from statutory changes effected, for the most part, in the latter half of the 19th century.” Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 129 (1973)

44 “the attitude of the [medical] profession may have played a significant role in the enactment of stringent criminal abortion legislatio...” Starting before the Civil War, the AMA resolved to address “wide-spread popular ignorance of the true character of” the babies killed by abortion. Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 141 (1973)

preborn humans a century before, and the AMA's continued alarm a century later over weakening criminalization of abortion,<sup>45</sup> as mitigated by another somewhat medical association, the American Public Health Association, which urged legalizing abortion.<sup>46</sup>

But Roe cites no indication that the shifts in acceptance of abortion had anything to do with any shift in understanding of the facts of preborn human life.

Stare Decisis is properly set aside when the facts underpinning precedent are shown to be incorrect. The principle applies to our understanding of past culture. The more ancient laxity about killing the unborn was properly set aside in response to facts. Past ignorance belongs in the past. The challenge for humans of every age has been to live so as to avoid collisions with known facts.

Stare Decisis: we do not challenge Roe. We rely on it.

Roe v. Wade has been “the law of the land”. We rely on it. We invoke stare decisis as a principle in our favor. As we argue under “Reasons to Grant the Writ”, we challenge the violation of Roe by lower appellate courts which have ruled saying Roe said what Roe obviously did not say: that evidence was made irrelevant, “as a matter of law”, that abortion in fact kills living human beings.

---

45 “Except for periodic condemnation of the criminal abortionist, no further formal AMA action took place until 1967. In that year, the Committee on Human Reproduction urged the adoption of a stated policy of opposition to induced abortion, except when [familiar exceptions are listed].” Roe, p. 142. “In 1970, after the introduction of a variety of proposed resolutions, and of a report from its Board of Trustees, a reference committee noted ‘polarization of the medical profession on this controversial issue’; division among those who had testified; a difference of opinion among AMA councils and committees; ‘the remarkable shift in testimony’ in six months, felt to be influenced ‘by the rapid changes in state laws and by the judicial decisions which tend to make abortion more freely available;’ and a feeling ‘that this trend will continue.’” Roe, p. 143.

46 “American Public Health Association. In October 1970, the Executive Board of the APHA adopted Standards for Abortion Services. ‘Rapid and simple abortion referral must be readily available through state and local public health departments, medical societies, or other nonprofit organizations.’” Roe, p. 144

Of course, the holding of Roe that everybody knows is that abortion is legal. We concur that abortion was legal, but we rely on the “independent ground for the decision” which has equal authority with the holding,<sup>47</sup> which is that abortion must stop being legal after it is legally recognized as killing living persons. Now that every court-recognized American legal finder of fact that has taken a position agrees, Roe requires states to outlaw abortion. It is a basic principle of stare decisis that precedents must fall when the facts upon which they are founded change.<sup>48</sup>

To the extent any ruling has precedential value, its value presumes it will be relied on in the context of its full reasoning rather than having parts selectively taken out of context.

“Virtually every one of the Court’s opinions announcing a new application of a constitutional principle contains some explanatory language that is intended to provide guidance to lawyers and judges in future cases. See, e.g., Crawford v. Washington, 541 U. S. 36 (2004); Strickland, 466 U. S. 668; Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U. S. 436 (1966); see also Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch 137 (1803). It is quite wrong to invite state court judges to discount the importance of such guidance on the ground that it may not have been strictly necessary as an explanation of the Court’s specific holding in the case. Cf. County of Allegheny v. American Civil Liberties Union, Greater Pittsburgh Chapter, 492 U. S. 573, 668 (1989) (KENNEDY, J., concurring in judgment in part and dissenting in part); (‘As a general rule, the principle of stare decisis directs us to adhere not only to the holdings of our prior cases, but also their explications of the governing rules of law’); Sheet Metal Workers v. EEOC, 478 U. S. 421, 490

---

47 Stare decisis preserves the authority of reasons for rulings along with the rulings [holdings] themselves: “Although we gave other reasons for our holding in Schleier as well, we explicitly labeled this reason an ‘independent’ ground in support of our decision, id., at 334. We cannot accept petitioners’ claim that it was simply a dictum.” O’Gilvie v. United States, 519 U.S. 79 (1996)

48 Dictionary.com: “Stare Decisis: the doctrine that rules or principles of law on which a court rested a previous decision are authoritative in all future cases in which the facts are substantially the same.”

(1986) (O'Connor, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (Although technically dicta, . . . an important part of the Court's rationale for the result that it reach[es] is entitled to greater weight . . .). *See Yarborough v. Alvarado, 541 U. S. 652, 660-661 (2004); Lockyer v. Andrad 538 U. S. 63, 71 (2003); Tyler v. Cain, 533 U. S. 656, 664 (2001)." Carey v. Musladin, 549 U. S. 70 (2006), Concurrence by Stevens

Had Roe been followed by the lower courts, they would have ruled abortion unconstitutional decades ago when they were first presented with overwhelming uncontested evidence that the factual underpinning of Roe's legalization of abortion – that judges are “not in a position to speculate” about “when life begins” – had “collapsed”. Those courts should have ended abortion’s legality both because stare decisis does not preserve rulings whose factual underpinnings no longer exist, and because Roe v. Wade explicitly ordered that abortion’s legality must “of course” “collapse” when it is “established” that its factual underpinnings no longer exist.

Stare decisis* preserves constitutional rulings least, especially applications of constitutional principles. Although Iowa relies on Roe's “collapse” clause, we do so because it is compelling and persuasive, not because it ought to be preserved to keep law stable no matter how questionable it is.

Roe is in the category of cases whose authority is least preserved by stare decisis: it is a case “where correction depends upon amendment [of precedent by the Court], and not upon legislative action,” and “particularly...when the decision believed erroneous is the application of a constitutional principle rather than an interpretation of the Constitution to extract the principle itself.”

In reaching this conclusion we are not unmindful of the desirability of continuity of decision in constitutional questions.<sup>8</sup> However, when convinced of former error, this Court has never felt constrained to follow precedent. In constitutional questions, where correction depends upon amendment [of precedent by the Court], and not upon legislative action, this Court throughout its history has freely exercised its power to reexamine the basis of its constitutional decisions. This has long been accepted practice,<sup>9</sup> and this practice has continued to this day.<sup>10</sup> This is particularly true when the decision believed erroneous is the application of a constitutional principle rather than an interpretation of the Constitution to extract the principle itself.<sup>11</sup> Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 665-666 (1944)

It is “strikingly true of cases under the due process clause”, that “this Court has often overruled its earlier decisions”. Burnet v. Coronado Oil & Gas Co., 285 U.S. 393, 406–407, 410 (1932) (Brandeis, J., dissenting)

Stare Decisis: Past Crimes Don’t Legalize future Crimes. Updated facts call for updated precedents. Getting away with crime doesn’t make crime legal.

This is another obvious limit to stare decisis. 46 years of killing the unborn doesn’t make irrelevant the now unanimously “established” fact that the unborn are innocent living humans, and killing innocent humans is not protected by the Constitution. Stare decisis has no power to perpetuate deprivation of fundamental rights. The fact that the fundamental rights of sixty millions have been cut off for 46 years cannot turn the Constitution into the willing executioner of sixty million more.

As this Court emphasized in Brown v. Board of Education, 349 U.S. 294, 300 (1955) (Brown 11), “the vitality of these constitutional principles cannot be allowed to yield simply because of disagreement with them”; how much more these constitutional principles must not be allowed to yield simply because of violation of them!

If the state in fact is denying due process or equal protection to a class of humans, the remedy is to declare the discrimination unconstitutional, not to deny the personhood of the victimized class, nor to declare evidence of the personhood of the victimized class irrelevant.

Errors in abortion prevention cases

Iowa's defense relies on the evidence that every baby of a human is a human/person from conception/fertilization.

Courts below have erroneously said this court ruled that evidence irrelevant. Only one of those cases was a civil case like Iowa's: Rhode Island, in 1973. The rest were all criminal cases. All of them said this Court said it doesn't matter whether those killed by abortion are people. None of those cases were reviewed by this Court.

None of the abortion cases this Court has taken, which were all civil cases, addressed when protectable human life begins.

Since this is an Iowa case, the first precedent we should review should be Iowa's.

The principal error in Planned Parenthood of Mid-Iowa v. Maki, 478 N.W.2d 637 (1991), was that the Court did not address her defense. Judy Maki invoked the Necessity Defense to justify actions necessary to save human lives. The Court completely ignored that defense and substituted, for it, a defense which Maki did not raise, which Maki considered as ridiculous as everyone else thought it was: that Maki invoked the Necessity Defense “to excuse criminal activity by those who disagree with the policies of government.”

In October 1990, Planned Parenthood filed a petition seeking to permanently enjoin Maki from trespassing upon its property, disrupting its business, and interfering with its patients. Maki contends that her acts do not constitute a trespass but instead are justified based on the defense of necessity. We apply the necessity defense only in emergency situations where the threatened harm is immediate and the threatened disaster imminent; the individual must be stripped of all options available to avoid both evils. State v. Walton, 311 N.W.2d 113, 117 (Iowa 1981). The necessity defense is generally not available to excuse criminal activity by those who disagree with the policies of the government. United States v. Kabat, 797 F.2d 580, 591 (8th Cir.1986). Thus, we do not believe the necessity defense has been established here to excuse Maki's repeated trespasses. NOW v. Operation Rescue, 747 F. Supp. 760, 770 (D.D.C.1990).

Even if Maki had actually “disagreed with the government”, as even courts do from time to time, and even if that were part of Maki’s motivation, did the Court think that when there is an additional reason for doing something besides the reason that justifies it, that it isn’t justified?

The ruling doesn’t ignore the name of the defense or of its elements. But it did not acknowledge the object of the defense: the harm which the defendant’s action had averted.

A third problem was giving Planned Parenthood standing to sue for the injunction against Maki. When a plaintiff in a lawsuit is at least partly responsible for the harm the suit seeks to correct, the plaintiff does not have the “clean hands” needed for standing to sue. Now that abortion is legally recognizable as the legal equivalent of murder, abortionists have no legal right to sue anybody for interfering with murder. The Court should have considered Maki’s considerable evidence that human life/personhood begins at conception. It was not irrelevant.

A fourth problem with the ruling was that it so misapplied the Kabat case as to reach the opposite result that Kabat sought while citing Kabat as its authority for it.

Kabat said courts can’t allow Necessity to establish, as a “harm”, what elected legislatures have fixed as necessary and good – because (1) that would be tantamount to courts reversing legislatures, which courts must never do.<sup>49</sup> And because (2) they had an alternative way to reach their goal without breaking the law: the political process. (The case was about protesters at a nuclear facility.) But Judy Maki (1) supported what legislatures were trying to do and only wanted the lower appellate court to do what SCOTUS directed them to do, and (2) when laws are fixed by courts, the political process is not a remedy.

---

<sup>49</sup> Kabat said “the necessity defense was never intended to excuse criminal activity by those who disagree with the decisions and policies of the lawmaking branches of government: in such cases the ‘greater harm’ sought to be prevented would be the course of action

Maki ruled that courts can't allow Necessity to establish, as a "harm", what nearly every legislature in America had established as a crime until SCOTUS overturned them all on the ground that SCOTUS wouldn't be "in a position to speculate" whether it was a harm, before being informed by fact finders such as those which Maki silenced.

See Appendix F for analysis of errors in several other criminal abortion prevention cases.

God's Relevance. Roe v. Wade treated the findings of theologians, along with those of doctors and philosophers, as not only relevant, but as controlling. ["Controlling" means having the authority to determine how a court must rule]

"When those trained in the respective disciplines of medicine, philosophy, and theology are unable to arrive at any consensus, the judiciary, at this point in the development of man's knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the answer." Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 159 (1973)

This followed Roe's section VI, whose first three subsections touched on treatment of abortion among three ancient pagan empires, three Greek philosophers, and two Christian theologians 800 years ago trying to speculate chosen by elected representatives, and a court in allowing the defense would be making a negative political or policy judgment about that course of action. Judgments of that type, however, are not the province of judge (or jury) under the separation of powers established by our Constitution." [797 F.2d 592] when souls enter preborn bodies. Roe, pp. 129-136.

---

Roe gave surprising weight to those authorities, according to the final statement in section VI: “It is with these interests, and the weight to be attached to them, that this case is concerned.” Roe, p. 152.

Roe did not identify disagreement between the two Christians, leaving us to wonder whose “inability to arrive at any consensus” left Roe “unable to speculate” whether unborn babies of humans are humans. Was it the contradiction between Christians and pagan philosophers? Was it between 800-year-old speculations and the findings of modern medical science?

Roe was correct to recognize a spiritual dimension to the abortion issue beyond medical facts such as those pointed out by Justices White and Rehnquist:

However one answers the metaphysical or theological question whether the fetus is a human “human being” or the legal question whether it is a “person” as is used in the Constitution, it must be at least recognized first, that the fetus is an entity that bears in its cell all the genetic information that characterizes a member of the species homo sapiens, and distinguishes an individual member of that species from all others, and second, that there is no nonarbitrary line separating a fetus from a child or indeed from an adult human being. Thornburgh v. American College of Obstets., & Gyne. 476 U.S. 774, 792 (1986)

But how does one grasp that a dozen cells merit the same protection as an important adult with a Ph.D.?

It is also a fact that without a nonarbitrary line, there can be no stage of gestation at which the deliberate killing of a baby can be objectively distinguished from murder.

But still, a dozen cells? One cell?

It is also a fact that the failure of some adults to grasp the humanity of babies at any given stage is a dangerous basis for permitting their killing, since as many adults fail to grasp the full humanity of quite a number of discrete [distinct] groups of born persons.

And yet even at two months, can a baby only an inch long have a soul? And suffer like any adult when it is torn apart? Very hard to grasp.

It is also a fact that the capacity to choose between good and evil – to choose to behave either as an angel or as a demon – is a capacity that distinguishes humans from animals. It is not related to brain size, since animals with much larger brains lack this capacity, while toddlers with much smaller than adult brains demonstrate this capacity. No known physical process accounts for this ability, supporting the belief acknowledged in Roe<sup>50</sup> that a soul attaches to the body whose capacity for discerning good from evil, and choosing between them, and being harmed by evil and blessed by good, is not limited to physical body size.

It is hard enough for humans to believe that someone who disagrees with him is fully human. It takes something beyond logic – faith – to reverence the right to life of someone too little to even find without a microscope.

Much the same may be said of the 14th Amendment.

The idea that everyone should be treated equally by law might be a popular idea among a few people who realize they would probably be slaves without it, but logic does not require it. Greek philosophy does not imagine it. Atheistic Communism does not tolerate it. Hinduism has no caste for it. Islam outlaws it. All Europe said equal rights could never work, when America began.

The same things may be said of the Declaration of Independence, “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal...” They didn’t mean “self evident to everybody”. It wasn’t self evident to the British king or parliament. They took it as a declaration of war.

And the rest of the world? Seeing a few born to privilege, while masses fight over crumbs of opportunity, such a declaration was incomprehensible and counter intuitive to most.

---

50 These disciplines variously approached the question in terms of the point at which the embryo or fetus became “formed” or recognizably human, or in terms of when a “person” came into being, that is, infused with a “soul” or “animated.” Roe, p. 133

So who was the “we” who “hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal...”?

The only people to whom equality seemed self evidently innate in us were those who accepted a principle found in only one place. The principle: Imago Deo – we are created in the Image of God. The foundation of freedom.

Without that vision, there could never have been a 14th Amendment, an “all men are created equal”, or Fundamental Rights. There could never have been Freedom. Imago Deo is larger than all those. It gave birth to all those. It calls us still higher than all those.

To the extent we sideline the One who gave us all those as irrelevant, we abandon all those. We revert to frail logic. We revert to the little that imperfect humans are able to grasp. Without a standard higher than ourselves, it is very difficult for our logic to grasp very much more than ourselves.

It is interesting to ponder, in a nation where even most Christians agree the Bible has no place in courtroom or political discussion because “America is not a theocracy”, why Roe v. Wade declared that the views of theologians were part of the basis for its holding. But Imago Deo is the elephant in freedom’s room.

Imago Deo inspires Americans to press for ever more equal rights and opportunities for all. Americans separated church and state, freed slaves, let women vote, and moved children from factories into schools. We are still struggling with the unborn, homosexuals, and immigrants. But it is only because of Imago Deo that anyone struggles.

But what about a mother’s rights to control her own body? What about the slave master’s right to control his own property? What about the husband’s right to control his own household?

Whatever right any husband ever had to control his wife lost the support of voting laws and equal pay laws as evidence failed to materialize that women are less competent, level headed, or hard working than men. Masters lost their property rights in their slaves as masters were unable to produce evidence for their “inferior race” myths in response to Bible preaching – although not without tremendous struggle. Nor can the right of a mother to kill a dependent survive forever in a society with any equal rights at all, as the public processes the evidence that an unborn dependent, like any other dependent, is a human being equal in value to that of his or her mother, and that there is no such thing as a partial human.

The Book in which Imago Deo is found contains many more helpful details which our Founders consulted as they fashioned our freedoms. Details which help us correctly identify a “suspect class” [a class of people who have historically been subject to discrimination], and whether there is anyone who is not a “person in the whole sense”. Appendix E lists a few of the verses which have led many Americans to see Imago Deo even in a tiny unborn baby.

However, SCOTUS need not openly perform the task of consulting the Bible in order to correctly understand what abortion kills. Every category of court-recognized finders of facts, and every American legal authority that has taken a position on “when [protectable] life begins”, has already done that work, it would appear.

They seldom say the Bible influenced their finding as openly as Roe said theologians were part of the basis of their ruling, but logic alone can’t explain their unanimity.

Nor can the remarkable absence of any official legal affirmation that unborn babies are not humans/persons, not even by this Court, nor by any other court which instead of taking responsibility for the claim has laid the responsibility on this Court, and even then has avoided declaring it a fact but kept it a “matter of law”, be accounted for by anything other than fear of pushing too far people who reverence Imago Deo.

All this Court needs to consult is the unanimous establishment of this fact by every American legal authority which has taken a position.

Possibly what motivated the Roe justices to say they found it relevant to consult theologians, is that a relevant, practical problem is created for courts by the conflict between Imago Deo and logic alone.

Faith looks at this virtually unrestrained killing of lives whose humanity logic struggles to grasp, and sees genocide. It sees the blood of 60 million slain running down the steps of the U.S. Supreme Court. This dangerously erodes public confidence in American justice. The only reason “we the people” created courts was to prosecute crime. Murder is the ultimate crime, and genocide is the ultimate murder. To the extent judges promote genocide, and especially after it becomes clear that is what is done, judges undermine the reason for their existence.

Fortunately the American legal system is able to balance doubt and faith and allow America to move forward, although no one is happy that it takes so long.

People debate facts and faith. Their debate spills into courts. America’s court-recognized fact finders rule. As the facts become clearer to everybody, there is a point of decision whether to ignore reality or accept and accommodate it. The process of legal recognition through fact finders is for a nation like the conscience is for an individual, from which courts stray at peril to their own credibility.

“We hold these truths to be self evident, that all men are created with unalienable rights...life...”

The “self evident” status of our fundamental “rights” establishes the role of popular understanding in legal reasoning. Rights are the Gift of God, our Declaration says. But in few nations during few centuries have they had the support of popular understanding. Popular understanding of our rights, which can exist only to the extent of reverence for Imago Deo, acts as a nation’s acceptance of God’s Gift. Popular understanding is not to be ignored. Not to be dismissed as irrelevant. Without it, no rights are safe.

No Roe backup is possible. Several wannabe replacement rationales wait in the wings to take Roe’s place when it “collapses”. 12 of them are addressed in Appendix

G. None of them can survive “establishment” that all unborn babies of humans are humans/persons.

“Indeed, our decision in United States v. Vuitch, 402 U.S. 62 (1971), inferentially is to the same effect, for we would not have indulged in statutory interpretation favorable to abortion in specified circumstances if the necessary consequence was the termination of life entitled to Fourteenth Amendment protection.” – Roe v. Wade at 159.

In oral arguments in Roe v. Wade, Justice Potter Stewart asked Sarah Weddington “If it were established that an unborn fetus is a person, you would have an almost impossible case here, would you not?” Weddington audibly laughed and acknowledged “I would have a very difficult case.” Stewart pursued, “This would be the equivalent to after the child was born...if the mother thought it bothered her health having the child around, she could have it killed. Isn’t that correct?” Weddington answered, “That’s correct.”

This exchange is what presumably provoked Justice Blackmun to write “[If the] suggestion of personhood is established, the case, of course, collapses, for the fetus’ right to life is then guaranteed specifically by the [14th] Amendment.”

Is it true that abortion’s fragile “legality” must “collapse” along with Roe? Can it be sustained, after Roe’s burial, by SCOTUS rationales added after Roe, to Roe’s “outer shell”?

The joint opinion, following its newly minted variation on stare decisis, retains the outer shell of Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113 (1973), but beats a wholesale retreat from the substance of that case. (Rehnquist, joined by White, Scalia, and Thomas, in Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833 (1992))

What is Roe’s “outer shell”? Can any rationale hanging on it stand alone, without it?

Since it does not appear to be identified anywhere, it must be taken as a metaphor of whatever it is about Roe that keeps abortion legal despite the shifting sands of legal rationales for it.

There is only one skeletal sustaining principle Iowa can think of in Roe, to which a succession of rationales may attach in turn: alleged uncertainty whether the unborn babies of humans are human.

This alleged uncertainty is articulated in Roe's "collapse" clause where it is explicitly identified as Roe's sustaining principle, in the sense that without it, Roe's holding cannot stand.

This uncertainty as a matter of law cannot still seriously be alleged. Granting that the unborn babies of humans are humans, making their killing the legal equivalent of murder, will this Court still insist their murder is some kind of "private and personal right", a "sacred choice" with which courts and lawmakers ought not interfere? Once this "outer shell" of alleged uncertainty who is human "collapses", no rationale can stand.

Let us be clear that Roe does not merely "collapse" and leave states free to outlaw abortion or keep it legal. The terms of Roe's "collapse" clause make it clear that the "establishment" that will overturn Roe's holding that abortion is a constitutional right will also overturn every law and court ruling which obstructs protection of the 14th Amendment right to life of every unborn baby.

Summary: Abortion on trial. It is not possible to invalidate Iowa's law without squarely addressing whether abortion is murder. The defense for abortion must prove that Iowa's law will not save human lives.

Every court-recognized legal authority in America, and every court-recognized fact finding authority in America, which has taken a position on it, has unanimously found that unborn babies are humans/persons from conception. No legal authority or court-recognized fact finding authority has said the unborn are not humans/persons.

Abortion, and its sustaining rationale that we can't tell if babies of humans are humans, threatens more than unborn babies. By successfully dehumanizing millions of persons over a term like "fetus", Roe demonstrates the device of denying defensible rights to any group the state considers "unwanted" (ie. PVS [Persistent Vegetative State], seniors, mentally ill, or prisoners) by simply alleging inability to define certain elements of humanity or personhood.

It is impossible for a "right to privacy", which gives mothers jurisdiction over the lives of unborn babies, to exist in the "penumbra" of the 14th Amendment, once legal recognition is "established" that these babies are "persons", which Roe equates to "recognizably human", requiring 14th Amendment protection of their Right to Life.

This impossibility is declared in Roe's "collapse" clause. The trigger of Roe's "collapse" clause was pulled by 18 U.S.C. 1841(d) if not long before.

Roe's holding that abortion is legal has "collapsed" by Roe's own order. No legal rationale, whether attached by SCOTUS to its "outer shell", or waiting in the philosophical wings, can stand in its place.

To the extent our Constitution stands, Roe's holding cannot.

CONCLUSION. Iowa wants to stop the murder of thousands of Iowa humans every year. Iowa wants to comply with the 14th Amendment which requires Iowa to protect them. Iowa asks this Court to save all still in danger, by granting Iowa's petition for a writ of certiorari to affirm that the babies Iowa would save are humans and persons, and abortion's legality has "collapsed".

Respectfully submitted, _____

Appendix A (The Ruling of the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals, or of the Iowa Supreme Court)

Appendix B (The federal trial court or Supreme Court entry of judgment)

Appendix C

Constitutional and Statutory Provisions: text

Preamble to the U.S. Constitution: We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

14th Amendment, § 1, sentence 2: No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

18 U.S.C. § 1841(d) As used in this section, the term “unborn child” means a child in utero, and the term “child in utero” or “child, who is in utero” means a member of the species homo sapiens, at any stage of development, who is carried in the womb.

Appendix D:

Roe's legislative history reviewed by Alabama Hamilton v. Scott, 97 So. 3d 728 (Ala. 2012)

A. Roe misstated the protection of the unborn child under the common law.

Roe 's viability rule was based, in significant part, on an incorrect statement of legal history. The Supreme Court in Roe erroneously concluded that “the unborn have never been recognized in the law as persons in the whole sense.” 410 U.S. at 162. Roe also referred to “the lenity of the common law.” 410 U.S. at 165. However, scholars have repeatedly pointed to inaccuracies in Roe 's historical account since Roe was decided in 1973.<sup>51</sup> “[T]he history embraced in Roe would not withstand careful examination even when Roe was written.” Joseph Dellapenna, Dispelling the Myths of Abortion History 126 (Carolina Academic Press 2006).

Sir William Blackstone, for example, recognized that unborn children were persons. Although the Court cited Blackstone in Roe, it failed to note that Blackstone addressed the legal protection of the unborn child within a 51 See generally Joseph Dellapenna, Dispelling the Myths of Abortion History (Carolina Academic Press 2006); John Keown, Abortion, Doctors and the Law: Some Aspects of the Legal Regulation of Abortion in England from 1803 to 1982 (Cambridge University Press 1988). See also Paul Benjamin Linton, Planned Parenthood v. Casey: The Flight from Reason in the Supreme Court, 13 St. Louis U. Pub.L.Rev. 15 (1993); Dennis J. Horan, Clarke D. Forsythe & Edward R. Grant, Two Ships Passing in the Night: An Interpretivist Review of the White–Stevens Colloguy on Roe v. Wade, 6 St. Louis U. Pub.L.Rev. 229, 230 n. 8, 241 n. 90 (1987); James S. Witherspoon, Reexamining Roe: Nineteenth Century Abortion Statutes and the Fourteenth Amendment, 17 St. Mary's L.J. 29, 70 (1985) (“In short, the Supreme Court's analysis in Roe v. Wade of the development, purposes, and the understandings underlying the nineteenth-century antiabortion statutes, was fundamentally erroneous.”); and Robert Byrn, An American Tragedy: The Supreme Court on Abortion, 41 Fordham L.Rev. 807 (1973).

---

section entitled “The Law of Persons.” It also ignored the opening line of his paragraph describing the law's treatment of the unborn child: “Life is an immediate gift of God, a right inherent by nature in every individual.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England *129.<sup>52</sup> As Professor David Kadar noted in 1980, “Rights and protections legally afforded the unborn child are of ancient vintage. In equity, property, crime, and tort, the unborn has received and continues to receive a legal personality.” David Kadar, The Law of Tortious Prenatal Death Since Roe v. Wade, 45 Mo. L.Rev. 639, 639 (1980) (footnotes omitted).

B. Roe misstated the protection of the unborn child under tort law and criminal law.

Professor Kadar and others have pointed out “the mistaken discussion within Roe on the legal status of the unborn in tort law.” Kadar, 45 Mo. L.Rev. at 652. The Court's discussion in Roe of prenatal-death recovery “was perfunctory, and unfortunately largely inaccurate, and should not be relied upon as the correct view of the law at the time of Roe v. Wade.” 45 Mo. L.Rev. at 652–53. See also William R. Hopkin, Jr., Roe v. Wade and the Traditional Legal Standards Concerning Pregnancy, 47 Temp. L.Q. 715, 723 (1974) (“[I]t must respectfully be pointed out that Justice Blackmun has understated the extent to which the law protects the unborn child.”).

Roe 's adoption of the viability standard in 1973 did not reflect American law. Viability played no role in the common law of property, homicide, or abortion. Clarke D. Forsythe, Homicide of the Unborn Child: The Born Alive Rule and Other Legal Anachronisms, 21 Val. U.L.Rev. 563, 569 n. 33 (1987). And there was no viability standard in wrongful-death law because the common law did not recognize a cause of action for the wrongful death of any person. Farley v. Sartin, 195 W.Va. at 674, 466 S.E.2d at 525 (“At common law, there was no cause of action for the wrongful death of a person.”); W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 127, at 945 (5th ed. 1984) (“The common law not only denied a tort recovery for injury once the tort victim had died, it also refused to recognize any new and independent cause of action in the victim's dependants or heirs for their own loss at his death.”).

---

<sup>52</sup> See Dellapenna, at 200: “[M]odern research has established that by the close of the seventeenth century, the criminality of abortion under the common law was well established. Courts had rendered clear holdings that abortion was a crime, no decision indicated that any form of abortion was lawful, and secondary authorities similarly uniformly supported the criminality of abortion. The only difference among these authorities had been the severity of the crime (misdemeanor or felony), an uncertainty that, under Coke's influence, began to settle into the pattern of holding abortion to be a misdemeanor unless the child was born alive and then died from the injuries or potions that led to its premature birth.”

The viability standard was introduced into American law by Bonbrest v. Katz, 65 F.Supp. 138 (D.D.C.1946), the first case to recognize a cause of action for prenatal injuries. Bonbrest implied that such a cause of action would be recognized only if the unborn child had reached viability. 65 F.Supp. at 140.

Viability was initially adopted by courts in prenatal-injury law, but its influence was waning by 1961. See Daley v. Meier, 33 Ill.App.2d 218, 178 N.E.2d 691 (1961) (holding that an infant born alive could recover damages for injuries suffered before viability); see also Note, Torts—Extension of Prenatal Injury Doctrine to Nonviable Infants, 11 DePaul L.Rev. 361 (1961–62). One thorough legal survey of prenatal-injury law a decade before Roe was decided concluded that “[t]he viability limitation in prenatal injury cases is headed for oblivion. Courts are coming to realize that it is illogical and unjust to the children affected and not readily amenable to scientific proof.” Charles A. Lintgen, The Impact of Medical Knowledge on the Law Relating to Prenatal Injuries, 110 U. Pa. L.Rev. 554, 600

(1962).

...Since Roe was decided in 1973, advances in medical and scientific technology have greatly expanded our knowledge of prenatal life. The development of ultrasound technology has enhanced medical and public understanding, allowing us to watch the growth and development of the unborn child in a way previous generations could never have imagined. Similarly, advances in genetics and related fields make clear that a new and unique human being is formed at the moment of conception, when two cells, incapable of independent life, merge to form a single, individual human entity.<sup>53</sup> Of course, that new life is not yet mature—growth and development are necessary before that life can survive independently—but it is nonetheless human life. And there has been a broad legal <sup>53</sup> See, e.g., Bruce M. Carlson, Human Embryology and Developmental Biology 3 (1994) (“Human pregnancy begins with the fusion of an egg and a sperm.”); Ronan O’Rahilly & Fabiola Muller, Human Embryology and Teratology 8 (2d ed. 1996) (“Although life is a continuous process, fertilization is a critical landmark because, under ordinary circumstances, a new, genetically distinct human organism is thereby formed. This remains true even though the embryonic genome is not actually activated until 4–8 cells are present, at about 2–3 days.”); Keith Moore, The Developing Human: Clinically Oriented Embryology 2 (8th ed. 2008) (The zygote “results from the union of an oocyte and a sperm during fertilization. A zygote or embryo is the beginning of a new human being.”); Ernest Blechschmidt, The Beginning of Human Life 16–17 (1977) (“A human ovum possesses human characteristics as genetic carriers, not chicken or fish. This is now manifest; the evidence no longer allows a discussion as to if and when and in what month of ontogenesis a human being is formed. To be a human being is decided for an organism at the moment of fertilization of the ovum.”); C.E. Corliss, Patten’s Human Embryology: Elements of Clinical Development 30 (1976) (“It is the penetration of the ovum by a sperm and the resultant mingling of the nuclear material each brings to the union that constitutes the culmination of the process of fertilization and marks the initiation of the life of a new individual.”); and Clinical Obstetrics 11 (Carl J. Pauerstein ed. 1987) (“Each member of a species begins with fertilization—the successful merging of two different pools of genetic information to form a new individual.”).

---

consensus in America, even before Roe, that the life of a human being begins at conception.<sup>54</sup> An unborn child is a unique and individual human being from conception, and, therefore, he or she is entitled to the full protection of law at every stage of development.

---

54 See Paul Benjamin Linton, Planned Parenthood v. Casey: The Flight From Reason in the Supreme Court, 13 St. Louis U. Pub.L.Rev. 15, 120–137 (1993) (“Appendix C: The Legal Consensus on the Beginning of Life,” citing caselaw and statutes from 38 states and the District of Columbia stating that the life of a human being should be protected beginning with conception).

Appendix E:

Scriptures SCOTUS must address before saying Christianity supports abortion

Introduction: Roe accepted validation of its alleged ignorance of whether unborn babies of human mothers are humans from the fact that many savage religions of ancient times had no problem murdering unborn babies. Which seems an undesirable precedent for a free people, since those religions had no problem with murdering adults, either, or savagely “sacrificing” them. But Roe thought its ignorance vindicated by elements within Christianity and Judiasm too.

When those trained in the respective disciplines of medicine, philosophy, and theology are unable to arrive at any consensus, the judiciary, at this point in the development of man’s knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the answer....There has always been strong support for the view that life does not begin until live birth....It appears to be the predominant, though not the unanimous, attitude of the Jewish faith.<sup>55</sup> It may be taken to represent also the position of a large segment of the Protestant community, insofar as that can be ascertained; organized groups that have taken a formal position on the abortion issue have generally regarded abortion as a matter for the conscience of the individual and her family.<sup>56</sup> The Aristotelian theory of “mediate animation,” that held sway throughout the Middle Ages and the Renaissance in Europe, continued to be official Roman Catholic dogma until the 19th

---

55 Lader 97-99; D. Feldman, Birth Control in Jewish Law 251-294 (1968). For a stricter view, see I. Jakobovits, Jewish Views on Abortion, in Abortion and the Law 124 (D. Smith ed.1967).

56 Amicus Brief for the American Ethical Union et al. For the position of the National Council of Churches and of other denominations, see Lader 99-101.

century, despite opposition to this “ensoulment” theory from those in the Church who would recognize the existence of life from the moment of conception. Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 159-161

Roe’s treatment of Christianity and Judiasm notes how men choose to respond to the Truth, and ignores what the Bible says is true.

Neither Judaism nor Christianity are understood by taking a poll of how well Christians and Jews live up to their standards. They are understood by reading the Scriptures they claim are their standards. (I hope the views of “secular Jews” who reject Jewish Scriptures is not part of Roe’s evidence of Jewish positions!)

Limiting understanding of any religion to human opinion is like a judge not looking up a law or a case for himself but taking lawyers’ word for what it says. It is like hearsay, compared with cross examining an eyewitness. Citing a book about The Book, as Roe did, is a poor substitute for reading The Book.

You will find varying opinions in various churches about how Christians ought to respond to abortion. But you will not find, even where those statements conflict, significant disagreement about what various verses say about the unborn. Those who base their positions on a careful reading of Scripture pretty much agree. Those who don’t, are no guide to understanding Christianity. SCOTUS can’t rule analysis of the Bible irrelevant, and expect to understand the religions who revere it.

Iowa will be totally surprised if SCOTUS conducts an appropriate analysis of Scripture in order to correct Roe’s vague reliance on religion for its alleged uncertainty whether the babies of human mothers are humans/persons. But this analysis must be done or SCOTUS must retract any implication that its legalization of abortion finds any support in any religion.

Psalm 139 says David’s human life began before his tiny body had arms and legs. Before conception.<sup>57</sup> He was God-recognized before he was legally recognized.

Psalm 139:13-16 You created every part of me; you put me together in my mother's womb. I praise you because you are to be feared; all you do is strange and wonderful. I know it with all my heart. When my bones were being formed, carefully put together in my mother's womb, when I was growing there in secret, you knew that I was there---you saw me before I was born. and in thy book all my members were written, which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them. GNB/KJV

Luke 1 says that in the womb, a baby (1) can hear voices; (2) can sense the difference between a voice sweet with blessing and a voice coarse with cursing; and (3) can choose which kind of voice to get excited about. In other words, (4) an unborn baby can choose between good and evil.

Luke 1:39 And Mary arose in those days, and went into the hill country with haste, into a city of Juda; 40 And entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elisabeth. 41 And it came to pass, that, when Elisabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the babe [John the Baptist] leaped in her womb; and Elisabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost: 42 And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb. 43 And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me? 44 For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy. KJV

A few verses before that tell us that even from the womb, a baby has a soul for the Holy Spirit to fill:<sup>58</sup>

Luke 1:15 For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb.

---

<sup>57</sup> Jeremiah 1:5 likewise affirms that our souls begin before conception: "Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations."

<sup>58</sup> This, along with Jeremiah 1:5, supports the capacity of an unborn baby to choose good or evil.

Saline abortions, which burn babies alive with acid that blackens over half their skin while eating out their lungs, are our cultural equivalent of the pagan god Molech, into whose red hot brass arms worshipers threw their children, whose screams were covered by the priests' drums. Today we similarly have what was given as the name of the first video of an ultrasound of an abortion: "The Silent Scream." God said this is so barbaric that He never even imagined such a thing. This is a remarkable idea for those who believe God foresees every detail of what evils men will do, but all translations and commentators seem to agree that's what the verse means. Of no other evil in the entire Bible does God say this was so evil that He did not foresee it.

Jeremiah 32:35 And they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech; which I commanded them not, neither came it into my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin.

God also has something to say about how we should respond to abortion. This verse was in Operation Rescue's masthead, until 1993 when the first abortionist was shot. The scenario is where murderers have so much power over their victims that they can "lead them away" to kill them where they choose, and by a schedule known to others. That pretty much limits the scenario to government-protected murders.

Proverbs 24:10 If you faint in the day of adversity, your strength is small. 11 Rescue those who are being taken away to death; hold back those who are stumbling to the slaughter. 12 If you say, "Behold, we did not know this," does not he who weighs the heart perceive it? Does not he who keeps watch over your soul know it, and will he not repay man according to his work? ESV

The only citation of any Bible verse in Roe is to Exodus 21:22, in footnote 22. Roe says the verse “may have” influenced Augustine! What was the point of adding such a speculation if it can’t even be documented that Augustine thought about it? Was it an attempt to stick a verse into the record that some have thought minimizes the value of the unborn, even though most do not? Cults use obscure, ambiguous verses as a wedge to get Doubt’s foot in the door. Here is the verse:

Exodus 21:22 And when men fight, and they strike a pregnant woman, and her child goes forth, [literally “so her children come out” according to an NLT note] and there is no injury, being fined he shall be fined. As much as the husband of the woman shall put on him, even he shall give through the judges. [That is, he can sue in a court of equity and a jury will decide any award.] (Literal Translation of the Holy Bible)

The uncertainty is whether “there is no injury” means “no injury to either the mother or the child”, or only “no injury to the mother – who cares about the child?” Commentator John Gill (1690-1771) notes places in the talmud that say the verses are concerned only for women, but he says the verse itself applies also to babies:

and yet no mischief follow: to her, as the Targum of Jonathan, and so Jarchi and Aben Ezra restrain it to the woman; and which mischief they interpret of death, as does also the Targum of Onkelos; but it may refer both to the woman and her offspring, and not only to the death of them, but to any hurt or damage to either.... John Gill’s Exposition of the Entire Bible

Adam Clark (1715-1832) understands it to protect mother and child alike:

But if mischief followed, that is, if the child had been fully formed, and was killed by this means, or the woman lost her life in consequence, then the punishment was as in other cases of murder - the person was put to death.... Adam

The Bible Knowledge Commentary is emphatic that the child's life is revered as much as the mother's. Commentaries since 1973 take a position on abortion.

21:22–25. If ... a pregnant woman delivered her child prematurely as a result of a blow, but both were otherwise uninjured, the guilty party was to pay compensation determined by the woman's husband and the court. However, if there was injury to the expectant mother or her child, then the assailant was to be penalized in proportion to the nature of severity of the injury. While unintentional life-taking was usually not a capital offense (cf. vv. 12–13), here it clearly was. Also the unborn fetus is viewed in this passage as just as much a human being as its mother; the abortion of a fetus was considered murder.<sup>59</sup>

Wiersby sees no uncertainty that the unborn are as revered as the born:

Verses 22–23 are basic to the pro-life position on abortion, for they indicate that the aborting of a fetus was equivalent to the murdering of the child. The guilty party was punished as a murderer ("life for life") if the mother or the unborn child, or both, died. See also Ps. 139:13–16.<sup>60</sup>

Tyndale's commentary sermonizes about it:

In the case of mothers and children, special laws were given to protect the helpless and innocent (21:22–25). If a man caused a woman to give birth prematurely but the infant was not harmed, then a simple fine was to be levied. If the child or mother was harmed, then the law of retaliation was applied. Punishment was restricted to that which was commensurate with the injury. In these verses God shows clear concern for protecting unborn children, a concern that people today would do well to heed. Surely the abortion of millions of unborn babies will fall under God's condemnation.<sup>61</sup>

---

59 Hannah, J. D. (1985). Exodus. In J. F. Walvoord & R. B. Zuck (Eds.), The Bible Knowledge Commentary: An Exposition of the Scriptures (Vol. 1, p. 141). Wheaton, IL: Victor Books.

60 Wiersbe, W. W. (1993). Wiersbe's Expository Outlines on the Old Testament (Ex 21:12–36). Wheaton, IL: Victor Books.

But the NIV FaithLife Study Bible, copyright 2012, on the eve of legal abortion's 40th birthday, seems to be pro-abortion:

21:22 as the judges determine Describes a situation where the woman who is injured survives the attack but her child does not. The penalty in such a case is a fine. However, v. 23 says that if the woman is killed, the death penalty is prescribed. Consequently, the life of the adult woman was deemed of greater value than the contents of her womb. This passage is frequently used to justify abortion: the woman was viewed as a person; the child was not.<sup>62</sup> [Wow!]

The Hebrew text simply doesn't specify whether "if there is no injury" applies to both child and mother, or to only one of them. Nor does the Hebrew say whether "the baby comes out" means healthy or dead. The disagreement of translators and commentators is possible because of this textual ambiguity. Commentaries since 1973 face societal pressure to stay out of Roe's way. Ancient Talmud entries likewise faced the social pressure of the ever present Molech worship surrounding Israel, and too frequently invading Israel. Jesus' metaphor for Hell was the "valley of Tophet" just outside Jerusalem where children were once burnt alive to Molech.

I would submit that while the text may be unclear, the context is certainly clear. From "be fruitful and multiply", Genesis 1:28, to "As arrows in the hand of a mighty man, so are the sons of the young. Blessed is the man who has filled his quiver with them...", Psalm 127:4-5, and all the laws in between about the importance of descendants, it is inconceivable that any jury in Moses' time could be apathetic about an unnatural miscarriage! The translations that leave this idea implied but not specified are MKJV, RV, YLT, GW, ISV, JPS, KJV, ABP, ASV, ESV, NLT, NIV84, NASB95, HCSB, NCV, TNIV, CPB, NirV. However, these translations limit concern to the mother: BBE, "causing the loss of the child, but no other evil comes to her"; CEV, if she "suffers a miscarriage" but "isn't badly hurt"; DRB "and she miscarry indeed, but live herself"; ERV "If the woman was not hurt badly"; and Message "so that she miscarries but is not otherwise hurt". As noted before, "miscarriage" is a poor translation since the Hebrew word as easily means a healthy birth.

---

61 Hughes, R. B., & Laney, J. C. (2001). Tyndale concise Bible commentary (p. 39). Wheaton, IL: Tyndale House Publishers.

62 Barry, J. D., Heiser, M. S., Custis, M., Mangum, D., & Whitehead, M. M. (2012). Faithlife Study Bible (Ex 21:22). Bellingham, WA: Logos Bible Software.

The Brenton translation expresses concern only for the baby: "And if two men strive and smite a woman with child, and her child be born imperfectly formed, he shall be forced to pay a penalty...."

Theologians are less likely than lawyers to consider in this verse the difficulty of assessing criminal intent in this situation. Two men are fighting, and a woman gets hit. What is she doing there? What responsibility did she have for getting out of the way? When the man hit her, was he actually aiming at her or was he just struggling against the other man? If he deliberately hit her, was he just defending himself against her attack, or was he deliberately aiming at the womb? These are questions for a jury. They are factors that could make a penalty greater for harm to the mother than for the child, or vice versa, depending not on their relative human worth but on where any culpability was focused.

Appendix F:

Errors in abortion prevention cases

The opinion below documents how universally courts in abortion prevention cases wrongly think Roe says abortion's "constitutional protection" makes irrelevant any facts established by court-recognized fact finders about who abortion harms.

"The rationale utilized by [t]he majority of courts. . . [was] that because abortion is a lawful, constitutionally protected act, it is not a legally recognized harm which can justify illegal conduct." (p. 19 of Opinion Below, quoting City of Wichita v. Tilson, 855 P.2d 911 (Kan. 1993))

Error #1: Tilson ignored Casey which had ruled just the year before. Casey<sup>63</sup> abandoned "constitutional protection" for abortion in 1992.<sup>64</sup>

Error #2: Tilson ignored Roe's open door to fact finders, and closed it.

Didn't Roe say in so many words "we can't even speculate whether these babies we let mothers kill are humans/persons – of course if that is ever established, then we will stop it"?<sup>65</sup> By saying doctors and preachers know more about it than SCOTUS, didn't Roe defer to fact

---

63 Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 945, 954 (1992)

64 Justice Scalia's dissent in Lawrence v. Texas 539 U.S. 558, 595, 123 S. Ct. 2472, 2493 (U.S., 2003), explaining how the Supreme Court, in 1992, abandoned Roe's position that the right of a woman to choose to hire someone to kill her unborn child was a "fundamental right": "We have since rejected Roe's holding that regulations of abortion must be narrowly tailored to serve a compelling state interest, see Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S., at 876,...-and thus, by logical implication, Roe's holding that the right to abort an unborn child is a 'fundamental right.'

65 "If this suggestion of personhood [of unborn babies] is established, the...case [for legalizing aborticide], of course, collapses, for the fetus' right to life is then guaranteed specifically by the [14th] Amendment." Roe v. Wade, 410 US 113, 156

finders,<sup>66</sup> treating personhood as a fact question?

Certainly by the principle “actions speak louder than words” it is reasonable for courts below, and Americans in general, to infer that SCOTUS has ruled that unborn babies are in fact not human beings and have no value other than for their “potential” to become human beings. Or that their personhood is irrelevant. But aren’t SCOTUS’s words also important? Haven’t these courts “decided an important federal question in a way that conflicts with relevant decisions of this Court”?<sup>67</sup>

Error #3: Roe never said abortion’s legality makes its reality irrelevant. Tilson assumes “saving the lives of unborn humans/persons” was made legally unrecognizable by Roe, but the reality is that Roe’s “collapse” clause makes unborn lives a strong enough legally recognizable interest to not only “justify” saving them, but to “collapse” the entire abortion industry.

“The evil, harm, or injury sought to be avoided, or the interest sought to be promoted, by the commission of a crime must be legally cognizance [should be “cognizable”, or recognizable] to be justified as necessity. ‘[I]n most cases of civil disobedience a lesser evils defense will be barred. This is because as long as the laws or policies being protested have been lawfully adopted, they are conclusive evidence of the community’s view on the issue.’ 2 P. Robinson, Criminal Law Defenses 124(d)(1), at 52. Abortion in the first trimester of pregnancy is not a legally recognized harm, and, therefore, prevention of abortion is not a legally recognized interest to promote.” (City of Wichita v. Tilson, 253 Kan. 295) quoting State v. Sahr, 470 N.W.2d 185, 191 (1991)

---

66 “We need not resolve the difficult question of when life begins. When those trained in the respective disciplines of medicine, philosophy, and theology are unable to arrive at any consensus, the judiciary, at this point in the development of man’s knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the answer.” Roe v. Wade 410 US 113, 159

67 Supreme Court rule 10c.

Error #4: Tilson* quoted Robinson out of context. Robinson explained why the Necessity Defense shouldn't be invoked by protesters against nuclear missile sites, at which there is no certainty that even one life will be harmed if the action is not taken, there is no danger is "imminent" by any definition, and there is time and real opportunity for more peaceful alternatives.

Error #5: Tilson* labeled as the "community view" the view that every community had criminalized. Tilson, quoting Sahr and Robinson, labeled as a "community view" what almost all state legislatures had criminalized since their founding but were forced to legalize by eight unelected men who said they were "in no position to speculate" on the position now being labeled "the community view".

It is circular reasoning for courts to force all states to legalize what they had criminalized since their founding, forcing communities across America to reverse their definition of abortion as murder, under protest more vigorous than America saw during the Civil Rights Movement, and then say it is only honoring "the community view" to rule that abortion cannot be recognized as murder!

A lesson from Nazi Germany is that some things which are legal are evil. Murder can be made legal, but not harmless. The slaughter of millions whose only offense is their existence has often been encouraged by laws, and justified by ruthless governments based on ruthless religions, but never justified by American legal principles or by the religion after which they were patterned.

Another lesson is the power of evil laws to intimidate "the community" into tolerating terrible evils which poison its "community values" into what "the community" itself recognizes as an abomination, both before, after, and even during the reign of those laws. One measure of how far laws depart from historical "community values" is the number of martyrs compelled to act by the departure.

Even apart from the poison of evil laws, the history of slavery that necessitated the 14th Amendment should remind us that not all “communities” have “values” that always protect the least among us. America is founded on higher law than “community values”. The Declaration of Independence, which officially articulates the foundation of American Freedom, explains some of the Fundamental Rights embedded in that Higher Law, and Who gave it, and the right of the people to alter, as necessary, usurpations of it.

Another device common in abortion prevention precedents is Straw Man arguments: substituting, for the actual defense of the defendant – saving life, something way easier to ridicule – like “interfering with another person’s lawful activity”.<sup>68</sup>

Below is another “straw man” replacement of “saving lives” with “interfere with the exercise of constitutional rights by others”, followed by the misguided assumption that Roe prejudices the inquiry whether abortion is in fact a “significant evil”:

“Appellants may not criminally interfere with the exercise of constitutional rights by others, and then escape punishment for their criminal conduct by asserting

---

68 Tilson summarized several other appellate rulings which employed the same Straw Man, such as: “...the ‘injury’ prevented by the acts of criminal trespass is not a legally recognized injury.” People v. Krizka, 92 IILApp.3d 288, 48 III.Dec. 141, 416 N.E.2d 36, “... a claim of necessity cannot be used to justify a crime that simply interferes with another person's right to lawful activity.” State v. Sahr, 470 N.W.2d at 191-192. Krizka is correct, if the “injury prevented” is merely abortions of unloved soul-less “blobs of tissue” whose humanity is uncertain. Krizka is cruelly corrupt, if the “injury prevented” is the mass slaughter of human beings who are “persons in the whole sense” as documented by triers of fact! Sahr is precise, if the only reason for breaking a law is to “interfere with another person’s right to lawful activity”. Sahr is foolishly sad, if saving human lives was the real reason a relatively minor law was broken, and it was to obscure that real reason that Sahr contracted with a Straw man.

the defense of necessity....A pregnant woman's decision to exercise her right under the Constitutions of the United States and of the State of California to terminate a pregnancy is not and cannot be held to be a 'significant evil.'" People v. Garziano 230 Cal. App. 3d 242 (1991) 244

This next case characterizes an acquittal of abortion preventers as allowing "strangers" to deprive mothers of their right to kill. But the defendants only asked that their case be judged by a jury. By calling juries "strangers", the judge deprived defendants of a trial by jury.

"If the legislature cannot delegate a 'veto power' to the patient's ... spouse .... we think it unlikely that a state court could delegate such a 'veto power' to strangers, to be exercised in such an obtrusive manner." Cleveland v. Municipality of Anchorage, 631 P.2d 1073, 1080 n. 15 (1981) [This was essentially quoted in] Pursley V. State, 21 Ark.App. 107, 730 S.W.2d 250 (1987), rev. refused July 22, 1987

Is the "equal protection" clause of the 14th Amendment violated by assembling the historically ambiguous elements of the Necessity Defense in abortion prevention contexts in a way that makes it illegal to save the lives of a discrete class of persons?

Can "imminence", in the context of self defense or defense of others, be defined as a given number of minutes or seconds away, even in situations where the window of opportunity to save life is farther away than that, making it impossible to both save life and comply with that definition? Or is it enough that the window of opportunity to prevent absolutely certain harm is about to close with no less alternative use of force in view?

Numerous courts say Roe said abortion is "constitutionally protected" so its harmfulness can't be "legally recognized" as a question of law, which is the opposite of Roe's statement that abortion is "constitutionally protected" only until its harmfulness is “established” as a fact question about which “the judiciary...is not in a position to speculate....” Roe v. Wade 410 US 113, 159. For example:

“...the justification defense [is still] unavailable because abortion is lawful by virtue of the United States Constitution.” Allison v. City of Birmingham, 580 So. 2d 1377 (1991)

“...the defense of necessity asserted here cannot be utilized when the harm sought to be avoided (abortion) remains a constitutionally protected activity and the harm incurred (trespass) is in violation of the law.”<sup>69</sup> State v. O'Brien, 784 S.W.2d 187, 192 (1989)

“Because the harm sought to be prevented is not recognized as an injury under the law, the defense of necessity is insufficient as a matter of law and the court properly refused to allow the defendant to raise it.” State v. Clarke, 24 Conn.App. 541, 590 A.2d 468, cert. denied 219 Conn. 910, 593 A.2d 135 (1991);

Or, abortion is constitutional, which makes irrelevant the evidence that Roe says would challenge its constitutionality. The opposite is true. The legality or “constitutional protection” of abortion is entirely irrelevant to legal recognizability of abortion as a “harm”, because Roe specifically said<sup>70</sup> its ruling was without prejudice<sup>71</sup> to that fact question. Roe says saving lives trumps abortion’s “constitutional protection”, once a conflict is “established”. Roe’s “of course” treats the fact as important, implicitly demanding that triers of fact be heard.

Lower courts say Necessity’s “comparison of harms”/“choice of evils” is subject to Roe v. Wade as a 69 The opinion also says abortion harms no legally protected interest.

---

Isn’t human life a legally protected interest?

70 In its “collapse” clause

71 Roe of course didn’t use the phrase “without prejudice”, but the effect of Roe’s “collapse” clause has precisely the same meaning and effect. It specifically declares the absence of a decision on the merits of “when life begins” and leaves future defendants free to litigate the matter in subsequent cases, as if Roe had never been decided.

matter of law, making factual evidence irrelevant. This violates Roe, which made itself subject to future factual evidence of personhood. Roe invites fact finders to resolve “when life begins”. Roe’s invitation is blocked by lower courts saying Roe prohibits triers of facts from even learning there is a question.

It would be presumptuous, and odd, for any lower court to say they can know something that SCOTUS said no court is qualified to know,<sup>72</sup> but no lower court has weighed in on whether abortion is in fact a “harm”, either, other than, ignoring Roe, to rule the fact “irrelevant” to Necessity’s “comparison of harms”.

Not all authorities agree with Wharton and Robinson that Necessity is available when the threat to the harm prevented is legal. But not every past formulation of Necessity elements fits the facts before us today.

Any formulation of legalisms for a particular situation that make it a crime to save lives of a discrete class of human beings<sup>73</sup> violates the “equal protection” clause, and fails the “absurd result” test<sup>74</sup> and the “smell” test.

Our ultimate litmus ought to be what is right, and what is good. “Is it lawful to do good...or to do evil? to save life, or to kill?” a great lawmaker once asked.<sup>75</sup>

---

72 We need not resolve the difficult question of when life begins. When those trained in the respective disciplines of medicine, philosophy, and theology are unable to arrive at any consensus, the judiciary, at this point in the development of man's knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the answer. Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 160

73 Discrimination against a discrete class is a civil rights violation. Dehumanization to the extent of alleged uncertainty whether people are “persons” and thus protected from slaughter by our laws is the ultimate discrimination.

74 “...where the language of a statute is clear, our normal rule is that we are bound by it. A legitimate exception exists, however, when that language leads to absurd results. The United States Supreme Court agrees. See Public Citizen v. Department of Justice, 491 U.S. 440....” [The rest of the quote is found in State v. Kirkpatrick, Kansas, No. 93,465, May 30, 2008) ]

75 Mark 3:4, Luke 6:9

We are talking about the most controversial ruling in the United States since slavery. We are talking about a ruling based on alleged ignorance of the factual nature of the unborn, whose humanity/personhood, over the past 43 years, have been unanimously affirmed by court-recognized finders of fact. This exposes formulations of Necessity that make it impossible to save millions of lives as legalistic quibbling, at the most charitable.

The “choice of evils” has the character of an equitable inquiry, where statutes do not specifically apply, yet justice must be discerned. It perverts the defense to attach book definitions/elements to the defense which were not designed for the situation at hand, and treat them as if they were inviolable statutes.

The longer any question reasonably raised remains unanswered, the more potential it acquires to undermine confidence in those questioned. Especially when it involves the very legal definition of which Human Beings have a right to live long enough to ask.

Appendix G:

No backup for Roe is possible

No other rationale than alleged ignorance can excuse killing babies

This section reviews several of the wannabe replacement rationales waiting to take Roe’s place when it “collapses”, to show that none of them can survive Roe’s “collapse”.

They are:

(Supreme Court and lower appellate rationales:)

1. Even if it is murder, moms rely on it 94
2. We can’t know if the very young or the very old are human 100
3. The unborn aren’t human – proved by our cruelty to them 101
4. SCOTUS’ credibility would tank if it unexpectedly returned to reality 104

(Rationales from outside case law:)

5. Babes may be human but they’re momnappers 105
6. Babes should be executed for breaking and entering 113
7. Babes are human but moms can’t be forced to nurture them 118
8. We are worth saving, but not babies – there is that much difference between us 119
9. Abort born children, whose personhood is almost as much in doubt 122
10. Handicapped babes would rather be tortured to death 123
11. Medical evidence says unborn aren’t human 124

“Indeed, our decision in United States v. Vuitch, 402 U.S. 62 (1971), inferentially is to the same effect, for we would not have indulged in statutory interpretation favorable to abortion in specified circumstances if the necessary consequence was the termination of life entitled to Fourteenth Amendment protection.” – Roe v. Wade

In oral arguments in Roe v. Wade, Justice Potter Stewart asked Sarah Weddington “If it were established that an unborn fetus is a person, you would have an almost impossible case here, would you not?” Weddington audibly laughed and acknowledged “I would have a very difficult case.” Stewart pursued, “This would be the equivalent to after the child was born...if the mother thought it bothered her health having the child around, she could have it killed. Isn’t that correct?” Weddington answered, “That’s correct.”

This exchange is what presumably prompted Justice Blackmun to write “[If the] suggestion of personhood is established, the case, of course, collapses, for the fetus’ right to life is then guaranteed specifically by the [14th] Amendment.”

Since 2004, the “suggestion of personhood” was “established” by federal law. The 14th Amendment right to life of unborn human beings has been “guaranteed”. Abortion has been no longer legal.

These facts can certainly be ignored. They cannot be squarely addressed and still refuted.

Is it true that abortion’s fragile “legality” must “collapse” along with Roe? Can it be sustained, after Roe’s burial, by SCOTUS rationales added after Roe, to Roe’s “outer shell”?

The joint opinion, following its newly minted variation on stare decisis, retains the outer shell of Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113 (1973), but beats a wholesale retreat from the substance of that case. (Rehnquist, joined by White, Scalia, and Thomas, in Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833 (1992))

What is Roe's "outer shell"? Can any rationale hanging on it stand alone, without it?

Since it does not appear to be identified anywhere, it must be taken as a metaphor of whatever it is about Roe that keeps abortion legal despite the shifting sands of legal rationales for it.

There is only one skeletal sustaining principle Iowa can think of in Roe, to which a succession of rationales may attach in turn: alleged uncertainty whether the unborn babies of human mothers are human.

This alleged uncertainty is articulated in Roe's "collapse" clause where it is explicitly identified as Roe's sustaining principle, in the sense that without it, Roe cannot stand.

This uncertainty as a matter of law cannot still seriously be alleged. Granting that the unborn babies of humans are humans, making their killing murder, will this Court still insist their murder is some kind of "private and personal right", a "sacred choice" with which courts and lawmakers ought not interfere? Once this "outer shell" of alleged uncertainty who is human "collapses", no rationale attached to it can stand by itself.

Let us be clear that Roe does not merely "collapse". The terms of Roe's "collapse" clause make it clear that Roe becomes unconstitutional, along with every law and court ruling which violates the 14th Amendment by obstructing protection of the Right to Life in the course of protecting abortion's fragile "legality".

Yet there are wannabe Roe replacements. First:

1. Should abortion remain legal, even after legal personhood of the unborn is established, because women have come to "rely" on murder?

Planned Parenthood v. Casey explains that mothers have for two generations relied on the right to kill their babies in order to advance their careers, so it would simply be too costly to mothers to suddenly punish them for killing the human beings whom they so urgently want to kill.

The inquiry into reliance counts the cost of a rule's repudiation as it would fall on those who have relied reasonably on the rule's continued application. (Cont'd)

Translation: We have to look into the terrible cost of outlawing abortion to mothers who have come to reasonably rely on the legal right to kill their own babies.

Since the classic case for weighing reliance heavily in favor of following the earlier rule occurs in the commercial context, see Payne v. Tennessee, [505 U.S. 833, 856] supra, at 828, where advance planning of great precision is most obviously a necessity, it is no cause for surprise that some would find no reliance worthy of consideration in support of Roe. (Cont'd)

Translation: since the "reliance interests" principle has previously been applied only to laws that affect business contracts, where businessmen need to be able to rely on a contract in order to plan, we shouldn't be surprised that some folks think the principle has no application to "reliance" on the right to kill.

While neither respondents nor their amici in so many words deny that the abortion right invites some reliance prior to its actual exercise, one can readily imagine an argument stressing the dissimilarity of this case to one involving property or contract. (Cont'd)

Translation: Although even proliferators agree women have come to rely on legal abortion, it wouldn't be hard to argue what a stretch it is to give that any legal weight.

Abortion is customarily chosen as an unplanned response to the consequence of unplanned activity or to the failure of conventional birth control, and except on the assumption that no intercourse would have occurred but for Roe's holding, such behavior may appear to justify no reliance claim. (Cont'd)

Translation: The only way you can argue that women rely on Roe is if you can believe Roe is the only reason they fornicate, which creates the babies which mothers need to kill. The increase in fornication caused by Roe might not seem like a strong justification to continue the killing.

Even if reliance could be claimed on that unrealistic assumption, the argument might run, any reliance interest would be de minimis. [minimal] This argument would be premised on the hypothesis that reproductive planning could take virtually immediate account of any sudden restoration of state authority to ban abortions. (Cont'd)

Translation: even if abortion could be justified because women have gotten so used to fornication, prolifers would say that is a weak argument since as soon as abortion is outlawed, women are able to immediately stop fornicating.

To eliminate the issue of reliance that easily, however, one would need to limit [re]cognizable reliance to specific instances of sexual activity. But to do this would be simply to refuse to face the fact that, for two decades of economic and social developments, people have organized intimate relationships and made choices that define their views of themselves and their places in society, in reliance on the availability of abortion in the event that contraception should fail. The ability of women to participate equally in the economic and social life of the Nation has been facilitated by their ability to control their reproductive lives. See, e.g., R. Petchesky, Abortion and Woman's Choice 109, 133, n. 7 (rev. ed. 1990). The Constitution serves human values, and while the effect of reliance on Roe cannot be exactly measured, neither can the certain cost of overruling Roe for people who have ordered their thinking and living around that case be dismissed. [505 U.S. 833, 857]

Translation: But if that objection to killing the babies of fornication were a good argument, it would be an argument against killing babies of fornication, but married couples should still be free to kill their babies. The fact is now that “murderer” has now become Americans’ self image. It is Who We Are. That is a sacred trust which law ought never violate, to self-identify as whatever you want. The Constitution allows no discrimination against any adult for how he sees himself – murderer, rapist, terrorist, sexually undecided, little child – so long as he doesn’t see himself as a Christian. Crime even helps Americans become rich, and we can’t just dismiss that economic benefit of legalized killing.

Americans United for Life summarizes this argument:

The Casey plurality ultimately justified its adherence to Roe and Doe on the foundation of the “reliance on the availability of abortion in the event that contraception should fail.”...The bottom-line rationale of Casey is that “reliance interests” in abortion—as a backup to failed contraception—justified retaining the rule of Roe. ... The assertions of the plurality opinion in Casey, its reliance interests justification, and its “undue burden” standard were adopted by the majority in Stenberg v. Carhart in 2000.<sup>120</sup> (An argument found at www.trolp.org/main\_pgs/issues/v10n1/Forsythe.pdf.)

Such reasoning can only escape public ridicule to the extent it remains uncertain whether unborn babies of human mothers are humans. This issue, upon which abortion’s legality hangs, has still not been addressed by any court.

Roe acknowledged a balance between the mother’s right to privacy, and the baby's right to life. Casey alleged the mother's "reliance interests" but not the baby's right to life. Here is Roe's statement:

As we have intimated above, it is reasonable and appropriate for a State to decide that at some point in time another interest, that of health of the mother or that of potential human life, becomes significantly involved. The woman's privacy is no longer sole and any right of privacy she possesses must be measured accordingly. (Roe v. Wade)

Now that the humanity of the unborn is established as a matter of undisputed, unchallenged, unanimous legal recognition, it is impossible to credibly argue that we need to be able to rob or enslave any group of American humans if it will benefit us, once we "have come to rely on" oppressing them "in order to achieve...equality". If the legal right to rob or enslave any human group is repugnant to American sensibilities, how much more the legal right to brutally kill them?

No doubt it will be hard for some mothers to break their habit of murdering human beings even after learning it is legally "established" that that is what they will have been doing.

But most Americans still, fortunately, find it unthinkable to knowingly murder. Most Americans, upon learning that the right to kill human beings has no legal justification and in fact is murder, will back away from any thought of such behavior as readily as a child backs away from pouring pop in the fish tank upon learning that it kills a living goldfish. They will back away from political parties founded on murder. They will impeach and vote out judges who continue to protect murder.

Legal abortion, after legal establishment of the humanity of those aborted, is legally unthinkable under any pretense, because of its unacceptable cost: reversal of our 14th Amendment, and of our laws against murder.

The Casey reasoning was only possible before federal law legally established the fact that all unborn babies are human beings. The “reliance interests” of mothers to kill can’t stand against federal establishment of the fact that those whom mothers “rely” on killing are human beings with full 14th Amendment Rights to Life. Fortunately no Court has said otherwise.

Were that indeed to become the Court’s formal position, let the courts say so! Let them put in writing that even though the unborn are human beings, so that aborting them is infanticide – the legal and moral equivalent of mass murder, mothers have developed such a habit of murdering them – such a blood lust – that the blood letting must go on! Such a ruling would very likely cause its injustice and error to become so apparent to everyone, that political solutions [i.e., voting against state judges and impeaching federal judges] would find more support.<sup>76</sup>

Americans will no more tolerate the doctrine that getting into the habit of depriving others of fundamental rights creates a Constitutional Right to legal protection while you do so, than they will tolerate a ruling that America must again permit slavery. Again, to set aside the 14th Amendment outlawing of murder, would definitely set aside its outlawing of slavery. But if Iowa is wrong – if Americans are truly ready to legalize murder and slavery again – Ezekiel 3:18-20 still requires that Americans be clearly informed that that is where they are going.

---

76 (Second dissent in Planned Parenthood v. Casey): “As long as this Court thought (and the people thought) that we Justices were doing essentially lawyers’ work up here - reading text and discerning our society’s traditional understanding of that text - the public pretty much left us alone. Texts and traditions are facts to study, not convictions to demonstrate about. But if in reality, our process of constitutional adjudication consists primarily of making value judgments; if we can ignore a long and clear tradition clarifying an ambiguous text, as we did, for example, five days ago in declaring unconstitutional invocations and benedictions at public high school graduation ceremonies, Lee v. Weisman, 505 U.S. 577 (1992); if, as I say, our pronouncement of constitutional law rests primarily on value [505 U.S. 833, 1001] judgments, then a free and intelligent people’s attitude towards us can be expected to be (ought to be) quite different. The people know that their value judgments are quite as good as those taught in any law school - maybe better.”

Also see Matthew 23:21-27.

Now that federal law has legally recognized the fact that the unborn are just as human as blacks, a northern state like Iowa that still knowingly, deliberately, consciously permits, protects, and even funds abortion can no more be tolerated than a southern state whose laws still protect slave owners.

2. We have to keep abortion legal because it is impossible to know whether the very young or the very old are human beings.

There is, of course, no way to determine [whether]...the human fetus is in some critical sense merely potentially human...as a legal matter; it is, in fact, a value judgment. Some societies have considered newborn children not yet human, or the incompetent elderly no longer so. (Planned Parenthood v. Casey, dissent by Scalia, White, Thomas.)

This fatalistic view that there is “no way to determine” who is human “as a legal matter” undoubtedly did not foresee 18 U.S.C. 1841(d), since it was articulated before the first efforts to insert Personhood language into the U.S. Code.

But for the sake of argument let’s suppose the argument fails, that 18 U.S.C. 1841(d) has resolved Roe’s alleged uncertainty about unborn humanity, and instead there is a future precedent that indeed it is impossible to know whether the unborn or the elderly are human beings. That excuse for such critical ignorance would just as easily stretch to include Blacks, Jews, Christians, or “illegals”, and/or return us to the days of slavery, so long as the majority within a state vote for it.

This is not so remote a danger in the case of “illegals”, where there is a significant movement in Congress and in conservative media to redefine who is under the “jurisdiction” of state laws. For centuries the word has indicated those whom state police can arrest. Some want it to mean some sort of undefined “allegiance” to America, which is measured by one’s place of birth rather than by one’s actions and is judged by people who have never met the people whose “allegiance” is questioned. No one has recommended enslaving “illegals” yet, fortunately, but legalization of slavery would be the direct legal effect of that redefinition, since it was that “jurisdiction” clause in the 14th Amendment which closed the loophole in the 13th Amendment through which slavery continued.

The doctrine that it is “impossible to know” who is human “as a legal matter” must be driven out of our legal discourse, where it threatens all our freedoms.

Roe acknowledged the 14th Amendment Right to Life of all human beings, at least with lip service. Many believe that through Roe’s alleged uncertainty about who is human, judicial disregard of human life has become implicit. To whatever extent that may be so, we cannot allow judicial disregard of human life to become explicit.

3. We need to keep abortion legal because the unborn are not human, as proved by how cruelly we mistreat them.

What if someone argues that lack of protection of a group of humans proves they are not, in fact, humans after all? That is very close to what Roe v. Wade argued. Roe argued, “In short, the unborn have never been recognized in the law as persons in the whole sense. (So why should the law so recognize them now?)”

How different is that from the reasoning that blacks are 3/5 of a person so they have no fundamental right to freedom, and that’s how it’s been from America’s founding? (That wasn’t the Scott v. Sandford reasoning. That ruling described blacks as “persons” but noted two clauses in the Constitution in which they were treated as property.)<sup>77</sup>

Roe reasons that if certain population groups have been dehumanized in past centuries, that raises doubt whether they ever have been, in fact, human. Who is safe from that caliber of “justice”? “Illegal” immigrants today are objects of discrimination. In America’s past, it has been Catholics, blacks, Chinese, Japanese, Slavs, Southern Europeans, Irish, and Germans.

It is theoretically impossible to make any progress against discrimination, to the extent we embrace Roe’s reasoning that objects of past dehumanization are actually not “persons in the whole sense” so they are actually “endowed by their Creator” with no rights whatsoever.

One example of Roe’s “evidence” was that Texas’ law criminalizing abortion had an exception when the pregnancy threatened the life of the mother. (As if SCOTUS was unaware of the legal principle of “self defense.”)

When Texas urges that a fetus is entitled to Fourteenth Amendment protection as a person, it faces a dilemma. Neither in Texas nor in any other State are all abortions prohibited. [There is always at least an exception] for the purpose of saving the life of the mother.... But if the fetus is a person who is not to be deprived of life without due process of law, and if the mother’s condition is the sole determinant, does not the ... exception appear to be out of line with the Amendment's command?” (Roe v. Wade, Footnote 54 of the Opinion)

Not that striking the exception for the “life of the mother” would make a law against abortion court-proof. As justice Rehnquist pointed out,

---

77 Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. (19 How.) 393-394 (1856) “6. The only two clauses in the Constitution which point to this race treat them as persons whom it was morally lawfully to deal in as articles of property and to hold as slaves. 7. Since the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, no State can by any subsequent law make a foreigner or any other description of persons citizens of the United States, nor entitle them to the rights and privileges secured to citizens by that instrument. ...9. The change in public opinion and feeling in relation to the African race which has taken place since the adoption of the Constitution cannot change its construction and meaning, and it must be construed and administered now according to its true meaning and intention when it was formed and adopted.

If the Texas statute were to prohibit an abortion even where the mother's life is in jeopardy, I have little doubt that such a statute would lack a rational relation to a valid state objective under the test stated in Williamson, supra. (Dissent by Rehnquist, section II)

It is hard to be sure whether to take Blackmun’s logic seriously, or as some kind of sarcasm, in view of the eminent sense which the “life of the mother” exception makes. Our Necessity Defense barely allows a hero to save others, typically at considerable risk to his own freedom if not to his life; we have no law which requires people to be life-saving heroes. We admire parents who put themselves in harm’s way for their children. We are not about to require it as a matter of law!

On the other hand, maybe Blackmun was right. Actively killing somebody whose threat to you is only his existence, goes beyond normal self defense scenarios. But to whatever extent Blackmun was right, it was evil hypocrisy for him to use America’s abandonment of a percent of a percent of America’s babies as his pretext for forcing Americans to abandon all of them.

Another example of Blackmun’s evidence against considering unborn babies “persons” is that penalties against mothers who abort are historically lighter than penalties for murdering adults. It does not overstate the strangeness of his argument to say he literally argues that legal mistreatment of a group of people casts doubt, not on whether laws and courts are just, but on whether their victims are even human.

We can’t deny fundamental rights to people, and then take our own wicked mistreatment of them as proof that they are not people after all so we are free to enslave them, as we used to treat blacks. Or torture and kill them, as we still treat over a fifth of our unborn babies.<sup>78</sup> That is not the kind of reasoning that has made America a “shining city on a hill”. It is the tarnish that has reduced the brightness God made available to us.

4. No one would ever believe the Supreme Court again, if they updated their precedents to keep up with updated facts.

(i) Overruling Roe's central holding would not only reach an unjustifiable result under stare decisis principles, but would seriously weaken the Court's capacity to exercise the judicial power and to function as the Supreme Court of a Nation dedicated to the rule of law. Where the Court acts to resolve the sort of unique, intensely divisive controversy reflected in Roe, its decision has a dimension not present in normal cases, and is entitled to rare precedential force to counter the inevitable efforts to overturn it and to thwart its implementation. Only the most convincing justification under accepted standards of precedent could suffice to demonstrate that a later decision overruling the first was anything but a surrender to political pressure and an unjustified repudiation of the principle on which the Court staked its authority in the first instance. Moreover, the country's loss of confidence in the Judiciary would be underscored by condemnation for the Court's failure to keep faith with those who support the decision at a cost to themselves. A decision to overrule Roe's essential holding under the existing circumstances would address error, if error there was, at the cost of both profound and unnecessary damage to the Court's legitimacy and to the Nation's commitment to the rule of law. Pp. 864-869. [Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 836]

It would end America's “Rule of Law” to correct error?!!

America would suffer “loss of confidence in the judiciary” if it ruled correctly?

---

78 “The abortion rate for 2012 was 13.2 abortions per 1,000 women aged 15–44 years, and the abortion ratio was 210 abortions per 1,000 live births.” http://www.cdc.gov/reproductivehealth/data\_stats/

The American public has so much confidence in the justice and lawfulness of the Supreme Court now, that any deviation from its rulings towards reality would be a blow to “the Court’s legitimacy”?!!

Of course this firm stand would make sense if it were on principle – if it were limited to positions based on reality, with a readiness to withdraw support of positions shown to be wrong. But this opening statement in Casey pledges commitment to positions even after they are exposed as wrong, and says that is necessary to preserve confidence in the Supreme Court. That is crazy talk.

ALTERNATIVES TO SCOTUS RATIONALES

A number of analogies have arisen in the veritable cottage industry of Roe replacement wannabes, offering to supplant Roe’s rationales when they fall, in order to keep abortion’s fragile “legality” on life support.

Care must be taken before using an analogy as the basis for obstructing the 14th Amendment Right to Life of millions of unborn U.S. citizens, who are called “posterity” by the Constitution’s Preamble. Care must be taken that both legs of the analogy, the illustration and the reality, at least match. Otherwise law limps along, as described in Proverbs 26:7 “The legs of the lame are not equal: so is a parable in the mouth of fools.”

5. We should kill unborn babies for kidnapping mothers.

Judith Jarvis Thomson wrote “A Defense of Abortion”. She published this in 1971, justifying infant murder before it was cool. This summary is taken from “Abortion: the Irrepressible Conflict” by Eric Rudolph.<sup>79</sup>

...M.I.T. Philosophy Professor Judith Jarvis Thomson[’s] “A

---

<sup>79</sup> That’s right, the Eric Rudolph, the one still in a Colorado prison for bombs, who managed to elude federal officers for years in a forest. The summary in his book of Roe wannabe rationales is a lot more scholarly than his manner of addressing the problem.

Defense of Abortion” is probably the most talked about pro-abortion essay. Using a series of examples, Thomson insists that a woman has an unqualified right to an abortion, even if the fetus is a human being. ...Because even if a person, the fetus has no right to use a woman’s body without her consent. To make her argument, Thomson asks you to imagine waking up in a hospital back-to-back with a famous violinist, who has a fatal kidney ailment. Because you are the only one with a matching blood type, the Society of Music Lovers has kidnapped you and hooked you up to the famous fiddler to “extract the poisons from his blood.” The hospital director tells you it will be another nine months before the violinist’s kidneys are in good shape and they can unhook you. Even though it was immoral for the Society of Music Lovers to kidnap you and put you in this predicament, unhooking you, the hospital director says, would be doubly immoral, because it would kill the violinist. Judith Jarvis Thomson, “A Defense of Abortion,” in The Abortion Controversy: Twenty-Five Years After Roe v. Wade. (Belmont, CA: Wadsworth Publishing, 1998) Poijman And Beckwith ppl. 117-118

The first problem with this parable is that mothers are not kidnapped into having babies. The analogy should have begun with you volunteering to hook yourself to the violinist, in return for the most exhilarating pleasure as you are being hooked up.

Even in the case of rape or incest, the analogy should emphasize that the violinist was an unwilling, unwitting participant in the scheme. The baby is as innocent as the violinist. If anyone merits retribution, it would not be the baby.

Second, the parable leaves out the consolation prize of the 9 months’ “captivity”: the sweetest music imaginable! Babies are even more adorable than violinists!

In fact, way more, because there are many people who don’t like violins, but there is nobody who doesn’t like babies. Well, if there actually are, it is questionable whether they are “persons in the whole sense.”

Now if the analogy had featured a trumpet player, it would have been a different matter. But it is too late now to mend mistakes: we are stuck with a violinist, and no violinist is pretty, compared with a baby. Unless of course it is a baby violinist. Babies cry and wet, but they also smile smiles of purer joy than any adult can comprehend, reminding young adults newly free from parents and from the overwhelming influence of peers in school, how to love. How to really love. How to glimpse Heaven.

Calling it “captivity” brings us to the third problem. Mothers do not lose their freedom just because they are pregnant. Most pregnancies cause almost no curtailment of activity for the whole nine months. Certainly nothing remotely as restrictive as being hooked up to a violinist!

In those few pregnancies where doctors advise mothers to remain in bed much of the time or risk losing the baby, it remains the mother’s legal choice whether to follow that advice, partly because any doctor’s analysis of the precise limits to mom’s activities which are safe for the baby is a guess: no one would accuse the mother of killing the baby if she had to get up and work.

And even in the most medically risky cases, the mother probably won’t even know she is pregnant for several weeks, and at about 7 months the child could be surgically removed and still live, with less medical risk to the mother, not to mention the child, than that of an abortion in a clinic which courts have protected from modern medical standards – so even the worst case would probably involve 6 months of voluntary restricted activity.

Fourth, to keep Thompson’s analogy honest, our alternative is not to merely detach the violinist and walk away, leaving him at the mercy of God to perhaps heal him. No, we must chop the violinist into tiny pieces, and then lay the pieces on a table and count them to be sure we did not miss any. And should our plans be interrupted by the violinist’s miraculous healing before we can take our first slice, we must not let him walk away unscathed, but must strap him down and finish chopping.

When a man is dying and it is time to give up on the tubes and monitors, we just withdraw them as gently as we can and let the man die as peacefully as we can. We don't rip out the plastic like we are pulling kittens out of a house fire, and then go in with machetes, acids, and poison gas to dispatch the poor slob as brutally as we can! American law calls that "cruel and unusual punishment". How dare this Thomson woman compare very real, very prevalent, and very brutal infanticide with the peaceful separation of the mythical violinist!

Fifth, the violinist is a "parasite" in a true sense, which no baby can be. God gave me my kidney for my sole use. I may choose to lend it out or give it away, but no one would imagine an obligation to encumber my body in this way.

By contrast, the baby is using an organ for which the mother has absolutely no personal use. The organs the baby is using were made specifically for another person besides the woman to use. The baby is not "out of place" in her body. He is exactly where unborn babies belong. A woman's body, in a way quite unlike a man's body, is not "hers". It is specifically engineered to act as temporary life support for the exact kind of being that is threatened by an abortion. She sees her kidneys as thus "mine" and "for me" in a way that her uterus is not.

Sixth, if the duty of a mother to nourish the Gift of God whom she has received into her Heaven-designed life support system cannot be presumed, what duty of any mother can be presumed? What duty is greater? Can the care of a born toddler be half as urgent, when the toddler is so much more capable of living safely with others? Can faithfulness to a husband be half as urgent, when her faithlessness will not cause her husband to die? Can financial responsibility seem a fraction as important? Can obedience to laws and court rulings be said to be one speck of her responsibility for her baby?

No! Telling a mother she owes no responsibility to nourish the life cradled within her is telling her she owes no responsibility to anyone for anything! She may, with no pang of conscience, no legitimate legal consequences, kill her toddler, her husband, her creditors, and her judge! Any defense of abortion is a legal theory of Anarchy!

Seventh, the violinist is not “mine” in any sense, but a baby is “mine” to its mother, genetically, built from the very substance of her own body and blood. We owe a higher level of responsibility towards what we call “mine”, than to a stranger. It is not as much that we “owe” more responsibility to our “own”, but that when our laws side with those whose hearts can’t motivate them to forbear destroying the most precious thing that is “theirs”, we should not be surprised when hearts harden to the laws that govern our legal responsibilities to strangers. As the will to take and to hurt rises, so does the cost of security and the losses from lawlessness.

Eighth, in the case of rape, the child of rape is the good that God draws out of evil. To destroy the child is to reject the incredible mercy and generosity God has shown.

Far from showing that God either does not love, or is not powerful, the child of rape is the whisper of God, “Look how powerful and good I am! Even out of this supreme horror for you, dear woman, I can create a dazzling miracle of joy: another human being, whole and entire, made in my likeness, made to praise and glorify and love and be loved by Me, who will console you for your suffering in his conception!”

Rape victims who bear their babies are offered the gift of healing through them. Indeed, it is the more horrible when a rapist is sterile, so that the abuse is “for nothing”.

Ninth, in healthy societies, even during the pregnancy, the miracle of motherhood is universally celebrated as a source of joy for the mother, the siblings, the father, the extended family, the neighbors, and the community, as expressed in customs like “Baby Showers”, passing out cigars (is that still legal?), “It’s a boy/girl!” balloons, infant dedication ceremonies in churches, and the “new baby” section of Hallmark Card displays. What sickness, what ingratitude, can spin this Gift from Heaven into “kidnapping” and “imprisonment”?

Much in our culture establishes this joy as beginning during pregnancy. “Baby showers” are celebrations, not times of mourning – not wakes. Broad happy smiles are often seen on expectant mothers as they announce their Gift from God to friends. Mothers prepare by reading books about how to be the best mother possible. They hold Mozart up to their bellies to begin their child’s education early.

The tenth problem with this parable is that, personal notions of morality aside, under a world government which socialists like Thomson dream about, the secret police would hook you up to the fiddler, or more likely, the dictator, and no one would complain. (Publicly.) Instead, you would be publicly admired, and counted as fortunate to be so valuable to the State! “The State” would as easily hook you up to anyone else, for its own alleged best interests, calculating your value by your benefit to it.

What keeps America from falling headlong into this nightmare government scenario is the Laws of God that proclaim our liberty. But these are the same Laws of God which proclaim life and liberty for the unborn. The same Laws of God which protect the unborn, protect the born.

History is full of states abandoning God’s Laws, after which states have no restraint against enslaving and murdering whomever they please, whether babies or violinist donors.

In fact, the farther American law “evolves” away from God’s Laws in which it is an unthinkable crime to destroy your own baby, Jeremiah 19:5, the less legal right you will have to unhook yourself.

Thompson wants our support for unhooking the violinist to extend to support for killing our baby. But it is our recession from God's laws that will make it illegal to unhook ourselves, while it will remain legal to kill our babies; the protection she wants for the right to unhook ourselves comes from God whose Laws against our own kidnapping also outlaw us murdering others.

“Duty to Assist” laws, and mothers’ responsibilities

The loss of freedom a mother experiences through pregnancy is infinitesimal compared to the kidnap victim in Thomson’s analogy; but is even an hour’s loss of freedom an unreasonable expectation of a mother? In other words, is there any precedent in law for forcing anyone, in any situation, to be a Good Samaritan?

Yes, according to “Good Samaritan” laws:

Good Samaritan statutes in the states of Minnesota and Vermont do require a person at the scene of an emergency to provide reasonable assistance to a person in need. This assistance may be to call 9-1-1. Violation of the duty-to-assist subdivision is a petty misdemeanor in Minnesota and may warrant a fine of up to $100 in Vermont. At least five other states, including California and Nevada, have seriously considered adding duty-to-assist subdivisions to their good Samaritan statutes. (Wikipedia, under “Good Samaritan”, 2011)

A “Duty to Assist” is most clear when one’s actions have contributed to the dependency which another now has upon you. For example, hitting and injuring someone with your car will not send you to jail if you can prove you could not help it; but if you “hit and run” in any state, the penalties will be severe.

Of course, in 98% of cases, the mother’s participation in conception is voluntary. Her actions have contributed to the dependency of her baby.

American laws - indeed, the laws of what we call “civilization” - are full of “duties to assist”. But especially in America.

If we have a retail store, we don't have a legal right to pick and choose which customers we want to serve, refusing to serve racial groups we don't want.

We can't put up a sign, “Every customer a wanted customer”, as a pretext for throwing out customers we don't “want” because of their color, IQ, religion, weight, legal training, looks, etc.

Public school teachers don't have a right to stop teaching students who don't learn fast, or who challenge teacher patience. No principal, no school board, has a legal right to refuse education to any remotely educable child.

Hospitals can't turn away patients based on whims, to let them die because they aren't “wanted”. Federal law requires hospital emergency rooms to care even for undocumented immigrants rather than let them die on the hospital doorsteps. Nursing homes can't put residents out on the curb who are not “wanted” any longer.

Landlords can't instantly remove tenants who won't pay, or who even damage property! Landlords must give tenants a reasonable time to find other housing.

No parent has a legal right to simply stop caring for a child because the parent doesn't like the child any longer. Minor child neglect that causes no harm to the child is grounds for removing the child and severing custody, and placing the parent on the Child Abuse Registry which bars that parent from future employment involving children. Neglect that causes injury is grounds for criminal charges that put parents in jail.

Contracts require commitments which must be kept even if a party to the contract no longer “wants” to keep their end of the bargain.

Thomson's logic fails. Our laws simply do not recognize any absolute right not to help those who depend on us. If her logic governed our laws, the same logic would end everyone's responsibility to whoever becomes dependent upon them to be responsible.

In no human relationship is a human being more dependent on another human being who has done more to create the dependency, than in childbirth.

The bonds of responsibility that bind together what we call "Western Civilization" would dissolve into utter anarchy, if responsibilities less than those of mothers for their unborn babies were stripped of legal support!

We can at least be grateful that Jarvis confines her logic to babies, so that it does not take the entire rest of civilization down with the unborn. For now.

6. Babies should die for breaking and entering.

Here is another analogy of Judith Jarvis Thompson, again summarized by Eric Rudolph:

Thomson says even where sex was consensual, the child's right to use his mother's body is still dependent on the mother's consent. ...If you opened your window "to let the air in" (had sex for pleasure) and a burglar (baby) climbed in instead, are you obligated to let him stay? What if you "installed burglar bars" (contraception) on your windows and a burglar came through anyway? A mother is no more obligated to let the unwanted child stay in her womb than the homeowner is obligated to let the burglar stay in his home. It may be "indecent and self centered" to deny the child the use of her body "for one hour," but it's not "unjust." Ibid, p. 129-130. "It would be indecent in the woman to request an abortion, and indecent in a doctor to perform it, if a fetus is in her seventh month, and she wants the abortion just to avoid the nuisance of postponing a trip abroad." Such an abortion would be immoral. The state, however, has no legal basis to interfere. Rudolph, Ibid., p. 130.

To make this analogy honest, the "burglar bars" need to be made out of tissue, to reflect the well known failure rate of contraception, and there needs to be a vacuum in our bedroom so powerful that innocent, unwilling, unwitting babies minding their own business outside are sucked in without any action on their part.

What callousness, to compare a Messenger from Heaven with a “burglar”! What anarchy, to see no responsibility to honor even humanity’s most sacred of trusts!

Thomson at least acknowledges that this logic applies as well after birth! As it inevitably must.

But it really applies far longer than that! It applies to an adult guest in your home. Thomson would have us free to boot out a guest into the cold, even if the guest is sick and needs hospitalization!

Orlando Depue was awarded damages after he was literally kicked out in the cold. It was a cold January night in Minnesota - we’re talking Eskimo weather. Depue had eaten dinner with a couple, the Flateus. Feeling sick after the dinner, he asked the couple if he could sleep over. But the Flateus refused to give him board and told him to leave. Too sick to drive, Depue was forced to sleep in the backseat of his car. In the morning his fingers were popsicles, and later had to be amputated. ...The Court said:... “The law as well as humanity required that he not be exposed in his helpless condition to the merciless elements.” [John T. Noonan, “How to Argue About Abortion,” in Morality in Practice(Belmont, CA: Wadsworth Publishing, 1998) p. 150] An obligation is assumed once you “understand and appreciate” the conditions of your fellowman, even if he is a stranger. What goes for strangers goes double for family members. (Rudolph, Ibid.)

Thomson’s logic applies to a tenant whom you, the landlord, no longer “want”, and justifies you breaking the law if you don’t “want” to give him time to leave safely.

Thomson’s logic justifies a prisoner who no longer “wants” to remain in jail, and thinks he can be free by killing a few guards. Sure, the guards had a “right to life”, and it was “immoral” to kill them, but the prisoner was under no “obligation” to permit his body to be “kidnapped” any longer.

How about the husband who no longer “wants” his wife? And who sees no reason to give her time to pack?

How about the guy who doesn’t “want” anyone traversing his sidewalk in winter anyway, so what harm is there if he does not shovel it?

How about the guy who WANTS junk in his yard? Or ragweed in his front lawn?

If Thomson is willing to open up a law firm to defend every criminal which her logic justifies, she is going to be busy!

What about a surgeon who, half way through surgery, decides he doesn’t “want” to stay in medicine and quits?

Is a man a murderer who refuses to hold out his hand, allowing another man to drown? The facts may be difficult to establish: would the man indeed have been saved? Or was it at least reasonable to have anticipated he would have been? Did the defendant know that? Did the defendant have any better reason, than hatred of the deceased, to not hold out his hand? But to the extent such facts are clear, the defendant is likely to be prosecuted in civil court, if not criminal. But Thomson will at least visit him in jail, if not marry him.

What if the police no longer “want” to protect people in a particular slum? And what if the city council approves that policy, and voters agree?

What if society no longer wants to protect the 14th Amendment fundamental rights of “Illegal Aliens”, and votes to sell them into slavery to meet the “legitimate state purpose” of balancing the budget? Or authorizes citizens to enslave any Illegal Alien whom they can find and catch?

What if a state no longer “wants” to be subject to the U.S. Supreme Court?

We are all little sovereign autonomous entities with no prior social obligation. We dole out rights on a voluntary basis. But we don't owe anybody anything, says Thomson.... Libertarian liberals like Thomson get their current definition of individual liberty from John Stuart Mill. Back in 1859, Mill wrote a book entitled On Liberty. Its purpose was to expound the principle that "the sole [justification for] interfering with the liberty of action of any [citizen] is self protection... The only purpose for which power can be exercised over any member of a civilized community, against his will, is to prevent harm to others. ...the conduct from which it is desired to deter him must be calculated [by him] to produce evil to someone else. The only part of the conduct of anyone, for which he is amenable to society, is to which concerns others. In the part which concerns himself, his independence is, of right, absolute. Over himself, over his body and mind, the individual is sovereign." (Rudolph, p. 77, 75, characterizing Thomson. His quote from Mill comes from John Stuart Mill, Autobiography, (Penguin Classics, 1989) pp. 66-69)

Iowa would not recommend any deference to this policy to any Supreme Court justice who would like his rulings to be obeyed! In addition to all the previously mentioned disregard of laws Thomson's legal principles would cause, courts would no longer be able to compel witnesses to testify! Subpoenas would be ignored! Because Thomson thinks we have no responsibility to help anyone who depends on us, so long as we do not actively hurt them. (But if they are babies we can actively hurt them.) Setting a murderer free to resume his spree, by refusing to testify against him, is not actively hurting anybody!

In fact, if a woman is free to hire a butcher to carve up her own flesh and blood, because she has no obligation to help her own flesh and blood, how much less does a witness have a moral obligation to obey a subpoena to help strangers, which in a notorious case or where defendants are threatening, is dreaded more than the birth pangs of ten babies?!

My recommendation to the Supreme Court is that if Thomson ever wants to go to law school and apply to your bar, reject her! She is going to be trouble!

This reasoning is as applicable to aborting a nation's Rule of Law as it is to aborting a Gift from God! Our "rule of law" means our American legal principle that laws are applied to everybody equally. No lawmaker, and no voting majority, is exempt from the laws imposed on a minority. Even if the minority is not yet born. "Rule of law" prohibits laws protecting dismemberment of a fifth of the unborn population, from which voters, lawmakers and judges are exempt.

In American law, the Rule of Law is most succinctly encapsulated in our 14th Amendment: "No State shall ...deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

The model for that was God's principle that a nation must "have one manner of law, as well for the stranger [immigrant], as for one of your own country", Leviticus 24:22. Also Exodus 12:49.

Incredibly, Thomson knows babies are human beings with a Right to Life. She does not dispute babies are made in the Image of God.

It is irrational for anyone with this knowledge to say mothers can pull babies into their homes and then butcher them rather than wait until the baby can depart in peace and safety, because mothers have a sovereign choice whether to help another whose life depends on their help; but then to say it is unlawful for a nursing home to stab Grandma to death or put her out on the street in December, because the nursing home no longer "wants" her and does not want to wait until another home, or charity, can take her in peace and safety!

It is irrational to say a mother has no responsibility towards her most sacred obligation and occasion for joy, and then to say any other citizen has any responsibility whatsoever towards infinitely lesser societal obligations which occasion far less joy!

It is irrational for anyone who knows babies are human beings to believe in both a Right to Abortion, and the Rule of Law. Both because Thomson's reasoning undermines obedience to any law defining our responsibilities towards each other, and because Rule of Law, by definition, does not impose burdens upon one group of human beings, such as the unborn, from which other groups are exempt. All of us were residents in our mothers' wombs: we lay upon the unborn burdens we are not willing to touch with one of our fingers, Luke 11:46, if we deprive our successors of the legal protection from maternal responsibility which we insist was properly binding upon our own mothers.

7. Unborn babies are humans but don't force moms to nurture them.

Lawrence Tribe is Professor of Constitutional Law at Harvard Law School. He is a frequent guest on network television and National Public Radio. (According to the back of his book, "Abortion: The Clash of Absolutes". Norton & Company, 1992.) One normally takes such credentials as a measure of intelligence.

But here is how he offers to solve the Infanticide madness:

...perhaps the Supreme Court's opinion in Roe, by gratuitously insisting that the fetus cannot be deemed a "person," needlessly insulted and alienated those for whom the view that the fetus is a person represents a fundamental article of faith or a bedrock personal commitment. Perhaps, as Yale Law School Dean Guido Calabresi has suggested, the Roe opinion for no good reason said to a large and politically active group, "[y]our metaphysics are not part of our Constitution." The Court could instead have said: Even if the fetus is a person, our Constitution forbids compelling a woman to carry it for nine months and become a mother. (p. 135)

What? "Even if the fetus is a person", a mother can slaughter her infant limb from limb? That's a solution?

Let's expose the Straw Men here. The mother who doesn't want to be "burdened" with a Gift from God has an alternative to brutally torturing him to death: when the baby is big enough to show very much, and cause very much discomfort, the baby will be big enough to be delivered safely and grow to maturity, safely, in a maternity ward, until the baby can go home to a loving adoptive family. It may be an expensive way to do it, and it isn't the best for the health of the baby, but it's a lot healthier than tearing him limb from limb, and thousands of parents are in line for the opportunity to pay all those bills in return for their own Gift from God!

Tribe imagines he can solve the world's problems by authorizing the slaughter of legally recognized Human Beings "even if the fetus, no less than Judith Thomson's violinist, is regarded as a person"! (Rudolph, ibid)

Tribe tells how the famous Infanticidist Kate Michelman, in 1970, at 33, was pregnant with her 4th child when her husband left her for another woman. No car, no credit because she hadn't worked, no child support because she didn't know where he was, her only choice was to murder her fourth, in order to have a shot at providing for the other three. Tribe overlooks the Adoption Option: instead of going deeper in debt to hire a hit man, she could have found adoptive parents who would have paid her bills with a handsome bonus that would have helped her other children!

Why is it that resisting murder never seems to enter the minds of these people, as they go over their options?

8. We are worth saving, but not babies – there is that much difference between us

The myth that there is a clear line of humanity distinguishing us adults from our unborn offspring is the same charade slave owners once played with Blacks.

It is funny to follow Mary Ann Warren's creative criteria of “personhood” by which unborn babies are not “human” or “persons”, but she is. From her book, “On the Moral and Legal Status of Abortion”:

(1) Consciousness (of objects and events, external and internal to the being, and the capacity to feel pain);

(2) reasoning (the developed capacity to solve new and relatively complex problems);

(3) self-motivated activity (activity that is relatively independent of either genetic or direct external control);

(4) the capacity to communicate, by whatever means, messages of indefinite variety of types, that is not just with an indefinite number of possible contexts, but of many possible topics;

(5) the presence of self-concepts, self-awareness, either individual or racial, or both. Mary Ann Warren, “On the Moral and Legal Status of Abortion,” in The Ethics of Abortion, (New York: Prometheus Books, 2001) Baird and Rosenbaum

Well, #4 (capacity to communicate on many topics) rules out children younger than 4, depending on how fussy you are about clarity of communication. Newborn babies can communicate about many topics with eye movements, smiling, and crying. Experiments are done with babies in the womb, trying to give them an educational head start. The younger the child, the more perceptive the adults must be to communicate. The Bible records a time when a 6-month unborn baby leaped at the sound of the voice of Jesus’ mother in a clear communication of joy. Luke 1:39-44. Will that testimony persuade Mary Ann Warren if we tell her?

#5, the presence of self concepts or self awareness, how would you test that in a child much under 7? Even then it could be difficult. It’s one thing to be self aware; it’s quite another thing to convince a skeptic that you are! And that is what Warren demands before she relinquishes her right to kill you! If there is a test available to prove a newborn is self aware, I would like to see it prove that a preborn is not!

#3 self-motivated activity free of genetic control; until we can get scientists to agree how much of adult behavior is genetic, maybe we better lop off the “free of genetic control” and stick with “self-motivated activity”. One would think the attempts of preborns to escape scalpels and suction machines, documented in the very first ultrasound video titled “Silent Scream”, is pretty overwhelming evidence of their capacity for self-motivated activity.

#1, Consciousness is proved by the reactions of preborns to many stimuli; from the suction machine to loving educational information. Ability to feel pain by 20 weeks is clearly enough established to be a threshold in Nebraska law, since 2010, beyond which abortion is a crime – not that anyone has proved that preborns feel no pain before that.

#2, reasoning that can “solve...complex problems” kind of rules out the author.

Had she settled for “ability to think about ...relatively complex problems” she might have escaped. But she had to insist on the “ability to solve ...relatively complex problems”. I think everyone can agree her essay argues against her being human.

Warren criticizes Thomson for allowing that murdering your own baby to avoid postponing a trip might at least be immoral: “...it would not, in itself, be immoral, and therefore it ought to be permitted.” Ibid.

Having assumed she has satisfied skeptics that the unborn are not human but she is, she next switches to an analogy that assumes everyone accepts Roe’s view of the unborn as merely “potential life”. As if there are people who insist on constitutional protection for life before conception which is only “potential”, she sets out to refute these fanatics.

Warren’s bizarre analogy has space aliens capturing you to clone your body. Is it right for you to escape, when that would keep innumerable people from being created out of you? “...one ACTUAL person’s right to liberty outweighs whatever right to life even a hundred thousand POTENTIAL persons have.” Ibid.

The contested issue was never whether “potential life” has any constitutional rights. It was always, in Roe’s world, whether life in the womb is human or merely “potential”. So Warren’s analogy is irrelevant to abortion of human beings after conception. So where is such a strange analogy relevant?

Well, perhaps it could justify laws against pimps forcing women into prostitution where pregnancies recur continually. Perhaps it could justify laws against Moslems forcing their daughters into marriage. Perhaps it could justify laws against rape.

Oh, wait, we already have those laws.

Warren’s analogy doesn’t fit much of anything, so it is difficult to imagine how to repair it. The mother would be pregnant by the normal human means, and then the picketers outside Planned Parenthood were actually space aliens in disguise, who beamed her up as she was headed inside and strapped her down to keep her from killing her own child. That would make a lot more sense. Aliens could provide us a much needed service by doing that.

9. Abort born children, whose personhood is almost as much in doubt.

[Michael] Tooley’s definitions of personhood are pretty narrow. He admits that “even newborn humans do not have the capacities in question...it would seem that infanticide during a time interval shortly after birth must be viewed as morally acceptable.” Michael Tooley, “In Defense of Abortion and Infanticide,” in The Ethics of Abortion, (New York: Prometheus Books, 2001), [and] Mary Ann Warren - adopt a very narrow definition of personhood, which allows them to deny the unborn child’s humanity, and therefore exclude him from legal protections. Their narrow definitions don’t hold water though because they end up excluding most of mankind, both born and unborn. [As reported in “Abortion: The Irrepressible Conflict” by Eric Rudolph.]

10. Wouldn't handicapped babies rather be tortured to death?

Surely a handicapped baby does not want to live! Surely he or she would be grateful for assisted suicide! Of course, since the baby is "incompetent" to express his own wishes, the decision must be made by the baby's legal guardian, the mother. Right? To assume, as a matter of law, that a baby would want to live, even with a handicap, is surely "establishing religion" "because it enforces a particular religiously inspired moral choice and lacks a countervailing secular justification". (Edward Rubin, writing for the Vanderbilt Law Review<sup>80</sup>. He argues for assisted suicide for adults; his argument is applied here to abortion.)

Fortunately, our laws still charge a guardian of a handicapped person with murder, who kills his dependent, and it isn't a defense to say "my dependent was unable to express his preference, so I assumed on his behalf that since she was handicapped, she would rather I kill her."

A website for the disabled says the greatest pressure on them is not the disability, but the attitude among the rest of us that surely handicapped people would rather be dead.

The challenges faced by people who experience forms of disabilities are influenced more by negative social expectations and tacit ideas concerning disability than by any emotional, physical, or cognitive impairment a person may experience. Each day, organizations work to educate the public about what life with a form of disability is like. For these organizations, that often times means assisting non-disabled neighbors and friends to understand that people with disabilities are not ill and that our lives are not without happiness or meaning.

The fact is - research on disability and depression has consistently shown that when people with disabilities report dissatisfaction with their lives they are not nearly as concerned with things such as reliance on machines or medications as they are with their relationships, financial security, or difficulties while at work. Despite this, the social message repeatedly presented is that life with a form of disability is miserable and when the people around us believe that without questioning it, it may become very hard for people with disabilities to think anything different. - www.disabled-world.com/disability/awareness/suicide.php

---

80 <http://www.vanderbiltlawreview.org/2010/04/assisted-suicide-morality-and-law-why-prohibiting-assisted-suicide-violates-the-establishment-clause/>

11. Medical evidence does NOT suggest “life begins at conception.” Although expert witnesses in court are settled that “life begins at conception”, a few outliers, whose credentials afford them no court-recognized legal value, grumble their dissent.

One example is Arthur Caplan, When does life begin?, Council for Secular Humanism, July 10 2014.<sup>81</sup>

Part of his quibble is that the word “conception” is not precise enough. If we are going to give an embryo constitutional rights, we need to know whether to do so when the sperm reaches the egg, or when it penetrates, or when genes start to recombine:

Put aside the fact that those who advocate for personhood never say when personhood precisely begins—when a sperm reaches an egg, when it penetrates the egg, when genetic recombination begins, or when a new genome is formed. There is plenty about personifying an embryo that makes no empirical sense.

The “problem” is irrelevant to any legal need we have today because we do not have the technology anyway to monitor when any of these changes occur. We can’t even tell for several more days if there is a body there at all, and we have to wait longer to be sure.

We are like the situation of our ancestors, so poorly understood by Roe, in which “quickening” – the baby’s first kicks that the mother can feel – was the first mothers could be certain they were pregnant. Before that, their clues were missed periods and nausea, but those could have been caused by other things; the kicks were the first proof.

---

81 <https://www.secularhumanism.org/index.php/articles/5639>

Before there was evidence of a human life, how could there be legal penalties for murder? The only possibility of penalties was for intent, not for actual killing. Roe completely missed this point and wrongly assumed that because penalties were less before quickening than afterward, therefore babies before quickening were not considered “persons in the whole sense.”

It was not until after the War Between the States that legislation began generally to replace the common law. Most of these initial statutes dealt severely with abortion after quickening but were lenient with it before quickening. Most punished attempts equally with completed abortions.... In short, the unborn have never been recognized in the law as persons in the whole sense.

Caplan also quibbles that while every adult human began at conception, whenever that is, not every baby survives to adulthood or even birth.

Those who argue that personhood begins at conception base their claim on the assertion that every human life begins with conception. That is true. But what they fail to acknowledge is that conception does not always create an embryo life, much less a baby. In fact, it usually does not.

? Is that an argument for denying human beings fundamental rights until they do die? Caplan continues the same puzzling point for a page:

The biggest empirical problem with the view that personhood begins at conception is the scientific fact that a large percentage of embryos lack the capacity, under any circumstances, to become human beings. During the period of embryonic development that begins with fertilization and ends a few days later with successful implantation of the blastocyst into the uterine wall—the period known as “preimplantation development”—up to 50 percent of human conceptions fail to survive, most likely due to genetic errors in the embryo.

Miscarriage is the most common type of pregnancy loss, according to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists. Studies show that anywhere from 10 to 25 percent of all clinically recognized pregnancies (meaning that an embryo has implanted) end in miscarriage, depending in part on the age of the woman.

The biological facts don't tell us where to draw the line as to when personhood begins. But they do show that many embryos that result from conception—indeed, the majority of them—lack the capacity to become living human beings. They do not produce disabled humans. They cannot produce any sort of human life. Science and medicine know this. They are simply too intimidated to say so.

Caplan's alternative view of "when life begins":

When a fetus has developed a brain that can support its basic biological functions, probably at around six months of life, it can be reasonably argued that personhood has begun.

But would Caplan outlaw abortion then?

What about Chimeras?<sup>82</sup> Where fraternal twins – separate eggs fertilized by separate sperm – combine into a single person? If they were two "persons" at fertilization, what happened to the other one? Does the combined "person" have double Constitutional rights? How about identical twins, where there is one fertilization that results in two persons? Are each of them half a "person"?

These objections are as silly as they sound. As Psalm 139 says, God knits us together in our mother's wombs and knows all our members before there are even any. If God wants to be especially creative with some of us, that is no justification for the rest of us to become murderers.

Although any concession is legally unnecessary, perhaps we proliferators may concede, if it will help these doubters understand our position, that when we say "life begins at conception/fertilization", we mean this as a precise legal position, but we do not mean it as an encyclopedic review of all the ways God creates "in secret", as the Psalm says – that is, where we cannot monitor.

Our legal position is that we must stop destroying what God creates. Whether through contraception that kills before implantation, or pills that kill weeks afterward, or surgery that kills months afterward. Whether God makes two persons out of one, or one person out of two, is irrelevant to our legal duty to welcome and protect every person that God sends us.

---

82 https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Chimera\_\(genetics\))

12. Shouldn't we oppose all laws whose origins are exclusively Christian?

Reverence for all human life has a “religious motivation”. In fact, it has a specifically Christian “religious motivation”. Only Judeo-Christianity, of all the world’s religions, asserts that God made all men in His own image, Genesis 1:27, making the killing of any legally innocent man “murder”. Other religions worship idols – all kinds of images other than human, but Judeo-Christianity directs our reverence to human life itself, regarding it as a terrible thing to divert our reverence to anything less.

Certainly reverence for human life (as opposed to some kind of “self” obscured by the human body) is not found in Hinduism, which asserts that human life is not worth living, and the goal of a Hindu is to deaden his desire to every good thing on Earth so when he dies he won’t have to come back.

It is not found in the B’hagavad Gita, where Arjuna is told by Krishna that he must fight and kill even though the other side is largely his own family, because he is a Kshatria, a warrior by birth, so it is his “duty” to do the work of the class into which he was born; and besides, killing people doesn’t hurt their souls anyway. It just sets them free from their bodies.

Certainly man as “the image of God” is not found in Islam which dehumanizes “disbelievers” as “the worst of men” (Surah 98:6) and Christians and Jews as “apes and pigs”. (2:63-66; 5:59-60; 7:166)<sup>83</sup>

And certainly not in Atheism, where there is no God, no God-given human rights beyond what you can seize for yourself, whose Darwinian and Marxist religious principle is “survival of the fittest”, justifying whatever raw lawless power is available.

---

83 For a little more detail, <http://unravelingislam.com/blog/?p=113>

Only Judeo-Christianity demands “equal protection of the laws”, as our 14th Amendment calls it, or “no respect of persons”, as the Bible calls it, for even society’s least influential – as epitomized in the Bible, the orphans, widows, poor, and immigrants (“strangers”). Jesus calls them “the least of these my brethren (brothers)” in Matthew 25:39-46, where He warns that mistreating these “least” is mistreating God, and will send you to Hell. This theology certainly violates Hinduism’s “caste system” with its brutal oppression of “untouchables”. Or Islam’s slaughter of “disbelievers”.

The day “religious motivation” becomes grounds for overturning America’s laws, respect for human life must disappear. Our “due process” and “equal protection” clauses will wither. What “secular purpose” do they serve?

What will keep us from enslaving “illegals”? Or executing everyone with a life sentence? Or abandoning “unwanted” or orphaned children? Or letting people die whose medical treatments would be expensive?

Will not a wit too dull to see the connection between (1) what reverence for life is left in our laws, and (2) the economic landscape our laws make possible in which brains are free to create, invent, and serve without fear of snipers, government torturers, etc., justify an unlimited central government (dictatorship) as more “efficient”?

What “legitimate state purpose” is served by The Due Process clauses and the Equal Protection clause which ended slavery? Only in retrospect is it clear that peace and freedom for all are the foundations of national prosperity, but what “legitimate state purpose” does national prosperity serve? Democrats openly argue that “the rich” are a national evil and must be accordingly taxed. Democrats also argue that wealth itself is evil, at least insofar as it is built upon energy consumption whose fumes will destroy our ecosystem in a century or two. The Population Control wing argues that human life itself is an evil, and must be reduced by two thirds to restore Mother Earth's ecosystem. Communists say "the rich" are such a national evil that they must be killed, and their goods confiscated and distributed.

What "legitimate state interest" can be asserted in opposition to these philosophies, without resorting to Judeo-Christian reverence for all human life as having equal value? Should not the Due Process and Equal Protection clauses be repealed? Are they not inconsistent with a "secular" legal system? What "legitimate state interest" do they serve?

Why do we need a Constitution? Why do we need courts? Dictators, preferred by atheists, don't need them. Justice just gets in their way. It is too "inefficient".

"Globalists" are a breed of people who do not even think the survival of America as a sovereign, autonomous government is good, because the world will be better under a "world government", or a "New World Order". Against such thinking, who can justify Freedom as a "legitimate state interest" without resort to principles which are exclusively Judeo-Christian?

The "Lemon Test" utterly, tragically, ignorantly fails to address these questions.

...the Lemon test, which provides that a statute is constitutional only if it has a secular purpose, neither advances nor inhibits religion as its primary effect, and does not foster excessive government entanglement with religion."
(From Edward Rubin's article)

This "test" does not resolve the issue whether prosperity, freedom, or national security itself are a "legitimate state interest", in opposition to the prevalent political philosophies and world religions which say they are not.

This "test" does not resolve whether legal values such as giving the right to vote to every adult, or freedom of speech even to criticize either church or state, count as a “secular purpose” even though they are supported by no world religion or anti-religion other than Judeo-Christianity.

The earliest record of a “Republic” in which all the people elect representatives to govern them was not in 600 BC in Athens, as encyclopedias say, but in about 1460 BC when Moses confirmed the “judges” whom the people elected.

Numbers 1:16 These were the tribal leaders elected from among the people.

Deuteronomy 1:9, 13 At that time I told the people...choose some men from each tribe who are wise, experienced, and understanding, and I will appoint them as your leaders. (The Book translation)

Josephus makes this interpretation explicit.

“[the leaders were] such as the whole multitude have tried, and do approve of, as being good and righteous men”. Antiquities of the Jews, Book 3, Chapter 4, Section 1.

An 1828 translator’s note adds that this selection followed campaign speeches, and then an election, making Moses’ government the first Republic, or representative Democracy.

“This manner of electing the judges and officers of the Israelites by the testimonies [campaign endorsements] and suffrages [votes] of the people, before they were ordained by God, or by Moses, deserves to be carefully noted, because it was the pattern of the like manner of the choice and ordination of bishops, presbyters, and deacons, in the Christian church.”

Calvin’s Institutes of the Christian Religion corroborate in detail the elections of Christian church leaders for several centuries.<sup>84</sup> Here is Calvin’s analysis of elections in the New Testament:

---

84 Calvin’s Institutes, Book 4, Chapter 3 and 4.

15. The next question is, Whether a minister should be chosen by the whole Church, or only by colleagues and elders, who have the charge of discipline; or whether they may be appointed by the authority of one individual? 546546 See chap. 4 sec. 10, 11; chap. 5 sec. 2, 3. Also Calv. in Acts 6:3, and Luther, tom. 2 p 374. Those who attribute this right to one individual quote the words of Paul to Titus “For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city” (Tit. 1:5); and also to Timothy, “Lay hands suddenly on no man” (1 Tim. 5:22).

But they are mistaken if they suppose that Timothy so reigned at Ephesus, and Titus in Crete, as to dispose of all things at their own pleasure. They only presided by previously giving good and salutary counsels to the people, not by doing alone whatever pleased them, while all others were excluded. Lest this should seem to be a fiction of mine, I will make it plain by a similar example.

Luke relates that Barnabas and Paul ordained elders throughout the churches, but he at the same time marks the plan or mode when he says that it was done by suffrage. The words are, χειροτονησαντες (Gr: hand stretcher, or voter) πρεσβυτερους και εκκλησιαν (Acts 14:23).

They therefore selected (creabant - [Latin: third-person plural imperfect active indicative of creo]) two; but the whole body, as was the custom of the Greeks in elections, declared by a show of hands which of the two they wished to have. Thus it is not uncommon for Roman historians to say, that the consul who held the comitia elected the new magistrates, for no other reason but because he received the suffrages, and presided over the people at the election. Certainly it is not credible that Paul conceded more to Timothy and Titus than he assumed to himself. Now we see that his custom was to appoint bishops by the suffrages of the people. Calvin's Institutes of the Christian Religion, Book 4, Chapter 3, Section 15

“The Works of John Robinson”, about 1,000 pages published by the pastor of the “Pilgrims” (specifically, the Separatists) trace the Scriptural origins of the Pilgrim vote given to every man, beginning with the signature of every man on the Mayflower on the 1620 Mayflower Compact, Western Civilization's first instrument of self-government. In a world where the freest existing government gave a vote to maybe 5% of the population, the vote in Plimoth was not only for the church members, but all men; not only free men, but servants. And when Elizabeth Warren became head of household in 1627 upon the death of her husband Richard, she was authorized to vote.<sup>85</sup>

Freedom of Speech to criticize both church and state was recognized as extending even to the right to respectfully criticize leaders of both church and state, creating the first expression of our First Amendment in a thousand years:

[In our Propheying Service we are] briefly to speak a word of exhortation as God enableth, and ... questions also about things delivered, [preached] and with them, even disputations, as there is occasion, being part, or appurtenances of that exercise. Acts xvii. 2 and xviii. 4. (Book 3, Chapter 8, "On the Exercise of Prophecy", Argument Tenth.) [We all prophesy to/reason with each other so] that things doubtful arising in teaching may be cleared, things obscure opened, things erroneous convinced [refuted]; and lastly, that as by the beating together of two stones fire appeareth, so may the light of the truth more clearly shine by disputations, questions, and answers modestly had and made, and as becomes the church of saints, and work of God.† Luke ii. 40; iv. 31, 32; Acts xvii. 2; xviii. 24, 26, 28.

It is legally reckless to allow a precedent for overturning a law to proceed one inch, just because it happens to conform with exclusively Judeo-Christian principles to the detriment of competing principles, before examining how much of our laws and constitutions would be left were such a precedent turned loose.

---

<sup>85</sup> See documentary at www.1620.US.

What if it is proved that the very institution of courts of law was established only in the Bible and not in the governments surrounding Israel where kings acted as lawmaker, judge, jury, and executioner? What if the very concept of “rule of law”, or “lex rex” itself – meaning “the law is king” - with rules equally binding upon everyone from whom not even the lawmakers are exempt, as opposed to “rex lex” where the king is the law, was established by Christians during the Reformation out of their Bible studies of the political governments of Moses and the church governments of Jesus and is found in no other world religion?

In that case, any precedent for justifying abortion as constitutionally protected because prohibiting it would “establish religion”, turned loose, would eventually close down all courts of law and replace our freedoms to vote, speak, and worship, with the form of government which preceded the Bible: dictatorship.

Our “rule of law”, applying to everyone equally, came from Ex 12:49, Lev 24:22, Num 15:15-16.

Corroborating witnesses came from Deu 17:6, 19:15, 18:16, 2 Cor 13:1, 1 Ti 5:19, Heb 10:28.

Sequestering witnesses was implied in the Bible but made explicit in Susannah, a 1st to 2nd century BC apocryphal book usually appended to the beginning of Daniel, a history cited in Virgin Islands v. Edinborough, 25 F.2d 472, footnote 3. Sequestering witnesses had to be practiced at Jesus’ trial; that assumption is the only explanation for why the witnesses had such difficulty agreeing. Mark 14:59.

American law has until now favored Biblical legal precedents which not only “disfavor” the legal systems of competing systems like Sharia law, the human sacrifices of the Mayans and Aztecs, and some other Native Americans, etc., but make criminals of their practitioners. Shall we abandon American law for that reason?

This is not an idle question. A growing number of Muslims in America want their communities, if not all America, to be ruled by Sharia law. If we are afraid to officially discern that American law, regardless of the extent to which it favors Biblical principles over competing systems, is better for America and for Americans and indeed for the whole world than any alternative, we will give it away and our children will read about it only in underground history books whose reading makes them traitors to the state, criminals worthy of torture and death, as it is in many countries in the world today.

Deuteronomy 4:5 "I have taught you all the laws, as the LORD my God told me to do. Obey them in the land that you are about to invade and occupy. 6 Obey them faithfully, and this will show the people of other nations how wise you are. When they hear of all these laws, they will say, 'What wisdom and understanding this great nation has!' 7 "No other nation, no matter how great, has a god who is so near when they need him as the LORD our God is to us. He answers us whenever we call for help. 8 No other nation, no matter how great, has laws so just as those that I have taught you today. 9 Be on your guard! Make certain that you do not forget, as long as you live, what you have seen with your own eyes. Tell your children and your grandchildren. (GNB)

Edward Rubin argues that reverence for all human life should be dismissed as “represent[ing] a choice of the traditional morality of higher purposes [than any individual’s changing feelings about right and wrong] over the modern morality of self-fulfillment”. Such laws should be suspect when “The traditional morality thus favored is specifically Christian”.

“Self fulfillment” is the morality of Psychiatry, which in many respects is a religion<sup>86</sup> which is state-established. (It is given police powers in cases of adoption, alleged insanity or child abuse, and in criminal investigations. Its practitioners are given access to children in school.)

86 See <http://saltshaker.us/BibleStudies/PsychologyVBible.htm> for a comparison of seven fundamental incompatibilities between psychiatry and the Bible.

William Daubert, et ux., etc., et al., Petitioners v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., No. 92-102, 61 LW 4805. This case changed the courtroom definition of a scientific discipline whose practitioners may qualify as “expert witnesses” from whether its articles are published in peer-reviewed journals to whether the findings are testable, saying, “One can sum up all this by saying that the criterion of the scientific status of a theory is its falsifiability, or [in other words] refutability, or testability.” The Court’s footnote on that quote was to a book<sup>87</sup> that gives psychoanalysis as an example of a pseudo-scientific [scientific in appearance only] discipline that is more like religion than science – more like astrology than astronomy.

But if “self fulfillment”, the goal of psychiatry, is a “modern morality” which is a fit foundation for law, how can any law against narcotics be Constitutional? Or smoking, or consensual sex with minors, or children skipping school, or sitting down when the judge enters the courtroom? Or disobeying a court ruling which does not satisfy or “fulfill” a litigant? Where are any bounds to such a legal theory?

Edward Rubin says:

“...arguments...that...prohibitions on abortion should be struck down because of their religious origins...have foundered on the awkward fact that many laws originate in religious thought.<sup>129</sup> No one would argue that we should hold that laws against murder violate the Establishment Clause because the prohibition is found in the Ten Commandments, or that we should declare the prohibition of slavery unconstitutional because it was first advanced by the Quakers and carried forward by evangelical Christians....

“The argument advanced in this Article does not rely on a general claim that laws against assisted suicide have

---

87 Karl R. Popper, Conjectures and Refutations (The Growth of Scientific Knowledge) published by Routledge, London and New York, 1963. For selections from Popper’s book, see www.Saltshaker.US/AmericanIssues/ChildAbuse/Popper.htm.

religious origins. Rather, it rests on an analysis that in this society, at this historical time, these laws are based on one particular, specifically religious concept of morality and specifically reject rival concepts of morality. They thus align with one side in an ongoing debate within society and employ the coercive force of the state to impose that side's view upon the other. This is simply not true for laws against murder or slavery."

Edward Rubin thus argues that it's OK to retain those laws supported by all religions; it's just the laws whose origins are exclusively Judeo-Christian which we should jettison. Rubin's ignorance of the exclusively Judeo-Christian origins of most of our laws, institutions, and freedoms is shared by most Jews and Christians, but it is still ignorance. His ignorance is, literally, breath-taking.

Moslems own slaves! Moslems justify "honor killings", [ie. if your daughter is raped and pregnant, or worse yet converts to Christianity, you kill her to preserve the family "honor"] conducted by families and mobs without investigation by police or courts. These "honor killings" are lawful, by Sharia Law. By American law, they are murders.

Hindus burned widows alive on their husbands' funeral pyres as part of their religion until restrained by Christian Englishmen! Hindus have a "caste system" by which, in India, especially in rural areas to this day, a huge portion of the population are "untouchables" and treated as badly as slaves. (It exists less in cities, which are more likely to enforce the Indian Constitution's prohibition of the caste system, which exists because of Ghandi, whose autobiography says half his religious inspiration came from Christianity.)

The mass murders and "labor camps" of Atheism's Communism are legend. Only Communism, of the world's despotisms, has slain more adults during its bloody career than Americans have slain their babies. (That doesn't count the unborn babies slain under Communism.) Communist China's slave labor keeps some of our prices low. Atheism offers no rationale against it, (that has any authority for any other atheist other than the power of one's personal opinion), and much for it.

Slavery, as practiced anywhere outside ancient Israel, was a crime by Moses' laws,. "Manstealing" was a capital crime, and the closest to slavery under Moses' laws was "bondservice" where someone works a maximum of 6 years to pay off a debt, (a little like our multi-year contracts for teachers, athletes, actors, soldiers, etc.,) during which time a permanent injury caused by the master is grounds for immediate release. Prisoners of war could be "enslaved" a maximum of 49 years, and they were kept in the custody of Levites who were in charge of enforcing the laws against cruelty to slaves. Exodus 21:16, 26-27, Leviticus 25

American laws against slavery and murder definitely "are based on one particular, specifically religious concept of morality and specifically reject rival concepts of morality. They thus align with one side in an ongoing debate within society and employ the coercive force of the state to impose that side's view upon the other." If this is to become the basis for repealing American law, out must go our laws against murder and slavery.

Here is the real problem: life is sacred, at least in the sense that it is profoundly in our own best interests to treat it so. "Western civilization" as we know it rests on the foundation of this truth which is affirmed exclusively by Judeo-Christian Scriptures. Civilization must inevitably regress into Barbarism to the extent this foundation is discarded.

One who seeks to move our laws outside the bounds of "due process" laid out in those same Scriptures and reflected fairly accurately in American law, doesn't understand life's purpose, or lacks faith in God to realize it.

It is serious enough when occasional individuals don't understand. But for society to heartily join such ignorance threatens the fabric of society.

This purpose is found in Christianity and nowhere else. Hinduism doesn't teach that life is sacred, but profane, and our purpose is to escape its cycles, and indeed to escape individual consciousness for all eternity. Hinduism's "self realization" turns out to be the "oblivion" sought by drunks – the complete cessation of anything left of "self".

But the fact human purpose as understood in America is not understood outside Christianity does not make it any less true, than the fact that Freedom of Speech, religion, and a vote for all are Biblical principles found nowhere else, makes these institutions unfit for American experience. Abortion therefore, besides its irreconcilability with current American law, ravages the very foundation of civilization. It has brought America to the brink of collapse, and given enough more time, will inevitably finish her off.

Appendix H:

Judge Clark's Case against Abortion

First, a summary of the ruling: then, several pages of excerpts. For the complete ruling, see www.saltshaker.us/SLIC/1992%20-07-20PaulClarkWichita.pdf

SUMMARY: Judge Clark said the evidence of Elizabeth Tilson's world-renowned expert witnesses established that life begins at conception, so that killing life before birth is a great harm:

I will find Mrs. Tilson's evidence proffered through witnesses Lejeune, Hilgers, McMillan and Rue relevant to the issue here. The entire evidence of her experts is admitted. The evidence proves that the medical and scientific communities dealing with the subject matter on a daily basis are of opinion that life in homo sapiens begins at conception; and harm is the result of termination of life under most circumstances.

That opinion—as a proposition based on intuition in earlier years—has always been foundation for the public policy in Kansas (State vs. Harris, Supra; Joy vs. Brown, Supra).

Judge Clark conceded that “Roe and its progeny” made a woman's choice to kill her baby legal, and gave a killing corporation a right to do its business without interference.

P. 8: Roe vs. Wade (401 U.S. 113, 35 L.Ed 147, 93 S.Ct. 705) set the law whereby the Constitution guarantees a right whereby a pregnant woman, during the first trimester, may make a decision whether to terminate her pregnancy without governmental interference in that decision.

P. 10: The City of Wichita's ordinance prohibiting “criminal trespass” (Ex. 4, Supra) protects the right of a corporation and its business invitees to do lawful business without interference.

P. 20-21: Roe, Supra, and Doe, Supra, declared a qualified constitutional right protecting a woman “from unduly burdensome interference with her freedom to decide whether to terminate her pregnancy,” (Casey vs. Planned Parenthood....

P. 24: Any corporation authorized to do business and its clientele still have a right to do lawful business without interference under the law of this state.

BUT “Roe and its progeny” did not reverse the policy of Kansas, that abortion other than to save the life of the mother is a “wrongful act”, making termination of pregnancy normally a “harm”.

[P. 23] Neither Roe vs. Wade, Supra; its companion case Doe vs. Bolton, Supra; nor their progeny (Webster vs. Reproductive Services et al, Supra; Casey vs. Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Penn., Supra) worked to abrogate the public policy of the state of Kansas that the voluntary act of prematurely terminating a pregnancy without qualifications is a wrongful act.

[That is, none of those cases undermined Kansas’ policy that abortion is a “wrongful act” - a “harm” - except when it is to save the life of the mother.]

(Cont’d) Those federal cases only qualified that policy by constitutionally guaranteeing to each woman in Kansas or elsewhere a “qualified right” (Roe, Doe, Webster, Casey) to decide whether to terminate her pregnancy.

[That is, those cases gave women a legal right to do it, but it’s still legally recognizable as wrong.]

In other words, just because it is legal, that doesn’t make it harmless. Harms are made legal all the time.

The City argues (Page 4, above) that Roe vs. Wade, Supra, declares that the voluntary termination of pregnancy cannot be a harm because it is legal. That is too broad an application.

In other words, the Supreme Court made abortion legal – the Court stopped states from stopping abortion with criminal laws. But the Court could not make abortion harmless (in fact Roe explicitly declined to rule on whether abortion is a “harm”, saying the justices were “in no position to speculate” about that) – and thus Roe has no effect on the right of individuals to prevent abortions. The “harm” of abortion is legally recognizable as serious enough to justify stopping it.

Another argument for the inapplicability of Roe to the restraint of individual life-saving is that the Bill of Rights, in whose “penumbra” the Roe court imagined they spotted a right to kill babies, has not one provision that restrains any individual. All its provisions protect individuals from their government!

P. 9-10: The Bill of Rights, federal and state, is law that protects the people from their government. Neither was meant to protect people from fellow citizens (Burdeau vs. McDowell. 41 S.Ct. 574, 65 L.Ed. 1048, 256 U.S. 465).

So the Necessity Defense justifies Tilson’s interruption of the corporation’s business, without affecting the law that makes that business legal.

[P. 25] Mrs. Tilson’s wrongful act is forgiven in the eyes of the law under the doctrine of justification by necessity. She is discharged from further responsibility in the case.

The City’s ordinance is still the law....

Judge Clark disposed of the objection that Elizabeth Tilson had political alternatives to breaking the law to save lives:

She has peacefully assembled to petition her government for a redress of what she felt to be a grievance. She has exhausted her alternative remedies. The City’s point is not well taken.

Although Judge Clark doesn’t develop the point, he insinuates that the abortionist does not have “clean hands” in the matter, being himself beyond the protection of Roe v.

Wade:

I will find that the City's evidence (Through Ms. Riggs) meant to show that the corporation's services were sold only to those pregnant women in the first trimester of pregnancy is not credible. The same is disbelieved.

FAIRLY COMPLETE EXCERPTS:

Excerpts from Wichita District Judge Paul Clark's ruling in favor of Elizabeth Tilson, July 21, 1992, Case No. 91 MC 108, "Memorandum of Opinion Following Bench Trial". (The complete ruling is posted at www.Saltshaker.US/SLIC/PaulClark)

(While blocking the abortionist's doors) she did not say nor do anything except perhaps participate in a song of praise for or a prayer to the same "Supreme Judge of the World" upon which Messrs. Hancock, Adams, Jefferson, Franklin, Clark and their colleagues at Philadelphia in 1776 relied "for the rectitude of [their] intentions..." (The Declaration of Independence, Kansas and United States Constitution Pg. 159 @ 160, 1988). The police say that they heard such activity....

Mrs. Tilson takes umbrage at any attempt to label her an "abortion protester." She says that she was not there to protest anything. Her goal was to "rescue" the unborn, their progenitors and the families of both from the ill effects that might follow termination of pregnancy.

...She admits [what she did but] asks for a ruling of not guilty, however, claiming at Page 3 of her trial brief that:

"...she was justified to go on the property ... as such entrance was necessary to protect human life and health. ... such entry ... is a lesser evil than either the taking of the lives of the babies ... or the potential harm to the mothers, and other affected persons ..."

The defense of justification relieves her of criminal responsibility under the facts here, she says.

The city contests the applicability of the defense of justification by necessity. At page 12 of its trial brief, the reason is stated in this way:

“... because the harm (abortion) sought to be prevented is not a legally recognized injury ..., there were legal alternatives available to the defendant. ... the legislature has effectively excluded the prevention of abortion as a justification for the commission of a crime. ...”

At common law, justification by necessity developed as a doctrine whereby under certain factual situations, the perpetrator is forgiven an act otherwise criminal.

The mindset supporting the doctrine is set out in a part of Magna Carta (15 June 1215) where those men, who for one brief moment of time were charged with administering the government, reaffirmed by mutual agreement that:

“No free man shall be seized, or imprisoned or dispossessed, or outlawed, or in any way destroy; nor will we condemn him, nor will we commit him to prison excepting by the legal judgment of his peers, or by the law of the land. To none will we sell, to none will we deny, to none will we delay right or justice.”

The first ten amendments to the Constitution of the United States (25 September 1789) are but affirmation of these basic principles of freedom following more than 500 years of practice. All 16 amendments following find root there.

...The common law is whence our jurisprudence evolved in North America. In Kansas our Supreme Court said:

“From the beginning of our history, the common law of England has been the basis of the law... and except as modified by constitutional or statutory provisions, by judicial decisions, or by the wants and needs of the people, it has continued to remain the law of this state.” ....

In Perkins on Criminal Law (Foundation Press, Inc., 1957) at Page 848, justification by necessity is explained in this manner:

“Where the act done was necessary or reasonably seemed to be necessary, to save life or limb or health, and did not in itself in any way endanger life or limb or health, the exculpatory effect of the necessity is too clear for argument; but where the offense charged is not one of particular gravity, the courts have not hesitated to recognize necessity as an excuse where the danger, or apparent danger to be avoided was less serious in its nature. Thus one unavoidably caught in a traffic jam is not guilty of violating the law which forbids stopping at that place, and a carrier has not violated the statute which requires a specified coach if the failure to provide that coach on a particular trip was due to an unavoidable accident which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against. These are not situations, it should be noted, where no choice was possible. The driver elected to stop rather than proceed until his vehicle was brought to a halt by actual contact with the one ahead, and the carrier could have avoided sending the train without the specified coach by sending no train [sic] at all. The harm threatened in these cases, moreover, is not to life or limb or health. The motorist is excused for stopping even if proceeding so slowly that the bumper-to-bumper contact would cause neither personal injury nor appreciable property damage, and the carrier would have suffered only only financial loss by complying with the letter of the law. In another case, it may be added, the court reversed a conviction of killing a deer in violation of the game laws because it was shown this killing was reasonably necessary to prevent substantial damage to defendant’s property.”

The federal courts recognize the doctrine (U.S. v. Simpson, 460 F.2d 515, 9th Cir. 1972; U.S. vs. Seward, 687 P.2d 1270, 10th Cir. 1983)

Neither party cites Kansas case law treating the doctrine....

[P. 7] The City claims that “the legislature has effectively excluded the prevention of abortion as a justification for the commission of a crime....” (Page 12, trial brief) At closing argument, the City pointed to H.B. 2646 Sec. 6(a)(2) where the legislature did in part define criminal trespass as:

“...(2) entering or remaining on private and or structure in a manner that interferes with access to or from any health care facility ...”

That law (H.B. 2646) is effective from and after July 1, 1992. It does not have the effect on this case that the City would give it.

[P. 8] I will this day hold that the doctrine of justification by necessity was legally recognized in the State of Kansas on August 3, 1991. The roots are anchored in common law. The purpose is to protect the people from their government by an assurance that in all matters right will be done and justice rendered.

The doctrine is found at A.L.I. Model Penal Code Sec. 3.02. It is instructive as a guide for practical application. These are the elements:

“(1) Conduct which the actor believes to be necessary to avoid a harm or evil to himself or to another is justifiable, provided that: (a) the harm or evil sought to be avoided by such conduct is greater than that sought to be prevented by the law defining the offense charged; (b) neither the Code nor other law defining the offense provides exceptions or defenses dealing with the specific situation involved; and (c) a legislative purpose to exclude the justification claimed does not otherwise plainly appear.”

As aforesaid, Mrs. Tilson admits violation of the ordinance. No “legislative purpose to exclude” the offense is applicable to this set of facts. No exceptions or defenses are set out in the ordinance or other law.

The provisions of (b) and (c) above contain no exclusion of the doctrine. We will then turn to the provisions of (a).

The “harm or evil” sought to be avoided by Mrs. Tilson through her violation of law on August 3, 1991 was the premature termination of pregnancy and the harm that may flow therefrom.

The City argues that premature termination of pregnancy is not “harm or evil” nor is it a wrong to be compared with Mrs. Tilson’s defiance of a police order because Roe vs. Wade (401 U.S. 113, 35 L.Ed 147, 93 S.Ct. 705) set the law whereby the Constitution guarantees a right whereby a pregnant woman, during the first trimester, may make a decision whether to terminate her pregnancy without governmental interference in that decision.

Those are the positions. To resolve the issue, we need to explore some general concepts of constitutional law, the history of law in Kansas and apply the same to the facts.

Every female at the site of occurrence on August 3, 1991 had a right to make an individual decision whether to terminate pregnancy (Roe vs. Wade, Supra). Any member of the public there that day had a right to purchase a service from the corporation.

The corporation had a right to do business there on that day. It was so authorized by the State of Kansas.

Mrs Tilson had a 1st Amendment (United States Constitution) and Section 11 (Kansas Constitution) right to express her opinion on any subject concerning governmental action or nonaction. Her opinion could be expressed by action, nonaction or words (Texas vs. Johnson, 491 U.S. 397, 105 L.Ed.2d 342, 109 S.Ct. 2533; U.S. vs. Eichman, et al, 496 U.S. , 110 L.Ed.2d 287, 110 S.Ct. ).

None of these individual rights are subservient to others. As with all constitutionally protected rights, each here involved has parameters (Burson vs. Freeman, 504 U.S. , 119 L.Ed.2d 5, 112 S.Ct. Decided May 26, 1992; Michigan Department of Police vs. Sitz, et al, 496 U.S. , 110 L.Ed.2d 412, 110 S.Ct. (1990); Roe vs. Wade, Supra;

State vs. Cleveland, 205 Kan. 426, 469 P.2d 251; State vs. Great American Theatre, 227 Kan. 633, 608 P.2d 951; State vs. Crouch, 192 Kan. 602, 389 P.2d 824). The Bill of Rights, federal and state, [P. 10] is law that protects the people from their government. Neither was meant to protect people from fellow citizens (Burdeau vs. McDowell. 41 S.Ct. 574, 65 L.Ed. 1048, 256 U.S. 465).

The City of Wichita's ordinance prohibiting "criminal trespass" (Ex. 4, Supra) protects the right of a corporation and its business invitees to do lawful business without interference. In this particular case, the ordinance can be viewed as establishing parameters on Mrs. Tilson's right to be on business property for the purpose of expressing an opinion.

When Mrs. Tilson remained on the corporate property "in defiance of an order ... to leave such premises ... personally communicated to ..." her by the police, she violated the law. The question then becomes is her violation excused by the doctrine of justification by necessity under the facts here presented?

Mrs. Tilson points out that her act of defiance "did not in itself in any way endanger life, limb or health" (Perkins, Supra).

The City's evidence proves that the corporation did business on August 3, 1991, but only after Mrs. Tilson was removed by the police.

The defense evidence shows that the corporation lost business that day, perhaps indirectly by Mrs. Tilson's conduct. A Ms. Tina McLaughlin gave evidence at trial. She said that she went to the scene of the occurrence on the day Mrs. Tilson was there. She was a member of the public, there to have a medical procedure done for the purpose of terminating her pregnancy. Ms. McLaughlin left scene because of the activity there before she had the medical procedure. She later made contact by telephone with Mrs. Tilson's colleagues and [P. 11] made an appointment to talk. After the talk, she reversed her decision to terminate her pregnancy prematurely. Her pregnancy went to term, whereupon a normal, healthy girl was delivered. The girl is named Destiny. She sat on her mother's lap during the testimony of her mother.

The overall evidence proves that those members of the public there that day as business invitees were at the least inconvenienced and at the most, obstructed because of Mrs. Tilson's act. No one was prevented from carrying out a decision to terminate a pregnancy that day, so far as the evidence shows.

Mrs. Tilson was on that day a housewife and mother from Wichita, Kansas, whose formal education terminated prior to the 12th grade, but who has been awarded a Kansas State High School Equivalency Diploma (K.S.A. 72-4530; K.A.R. 91-10-1). Her training in obstetrics and gynecology is limited to the practical gained through experiences as a mother and woman, so far as the evidence here shows. As to the field of human genetics and histogenesis of homo sapiens while en ventre sa mere, her knowledge comes from a magazine article (Life Before Birth, ULifeU, April 30, 1965; Defense Exhibit B). Practical experience gained by personal actions and observations in human relationships constitute her psychological knowledge. So far as the evidence here proves, she probably has limited knowledge of and little interest in concepts of constitutional law evolving as American jurisprudence from the common law of England.

She sees through her heart. Her inner voice tells her that the premature termination of pregnancy by surgical procedure terminates life. By intuition, she maintains that it can also cause great psychological harm to "the woman, the father of the baby, the grandparents, and brothers and sisters involved." It was intuition that drove her actions on August 3, 1991. She did what she thought was right, but it is the law of the land from where the light comes to judge whether or not her actions were justified under law.

To prove her point that the service offered by the corporation on that day terminated life, she offered the testimony of experts. From Paris, France, she called to testify one Dr. Jerome Lejeune. He holds doctorate degrees in medicine and science. He has for the last 40 years divided his time between the practice of medicine and research of human genetics in a teaching environment. His credentials prove that he is at this time recognized by the scientific community as the world's expert in the field of human genetics. Pathology of the chromosome is his particular specialty.

Dr. Lejeune is of the opinion that human beings (homo sapiens) begin life at conception. He gave as reason for his opinion certain scientific facts. A few are set out here. When the ovum donated by the woman is fertilized by the sperm from the man, all ingredients and all instruction necessary to make a human being are therein contained. The new human has a unique genetic organization. The mother is the sole source of shelter and vital fluids for the term of the pregnancy. This need not be the biological mother; any woman's body will do so long as the recipient's body is in the same stage of ovulation as the donor. The new being forms all its own body systems, to include circulatory. It is "a little man in a space capsule," Dr. Lejeune says.

[P. 13] In further support of his opinion, Dr. Lejeune points out that tests done after the fertilized ovum has divided one time shows the protein of the new being is distinct from its progenitors.

The "D.N.A. bar code" - now popular in criminal identification (K.S.A. 1991 Supp. 21-2511) is present after the eighth division from fertilization. At 90 days from fertilization, all systems are fully developed. The fingerprints and palmprints are present and could be taken and recorded at that time. Those will be the same forever. Growth of the new being and its various organs continue for 25 years after fertilization, the doctor testified.

Dr. Thomas Hilgers was called from Nebraska to give evidence. He is a medical doctor, certified as trained in obstetrics and gynecology. His specialty is reproductive medicine. He has 20 years experience in his profession. He has authored several books and scientific papers of significance in his field.

Dr. Hilgers opines that life for the human being begins at conception. Through him, certain exhibits were brought as evidence, meant to prove his point.

Exhibit D is a video tape made by the witness. It was nine years in production. It depicts scenes meant to demonstrate development of homo sapiens in utero from conception through a few minutes after normal, live birth. Sonogram is the primary tool used for the depiction of Exhibit D. All the subjects where sonography is used are live patients, pregnant at the time. It shows, among other things, considerable embryonic movement before the mother can feel it within her body. It shows fertilization, then heart beat at 16 days following.

[P. 14] The witness says that brain waves have been demonstrated at 42 days after fertilization in humans. His experience is that 12 weeks from fertilization, all normal, well-baby reflexes are present in the new being and at approximately 22 weeks gestational (20 weeks after fertilization) the body of the mother is not necessary for further life of the new human being, given modern medical techniques, Dr. Hilgers explains.

Vincent Montgomery Rue, Ph.D. was called by Mrs. Tilson. His qualifications fill 13 pages (Defendant's Exhibit O). He is recognized in his field as one of the world's leading experts on the post-psychological ramifications, diagnosis of mental illness arising therefrom and treatment therefore of those persons so affected following the voluntary premature termination of pregnancy. His patients over the years have included mothers, fathers, siblings and grandparents suffering in the symptoms ascribed to a diagnosis of post-traumatic stress disorder (D.S.M. 111 309.81 Axis IV (Pg. 26) – Physical Injury or Illness as a Stressor). It follows a feeling of guilt or a sense of loss, Dr. Rue says, both natural occurrences in the psyche of human beings.

From Jackson, Mississippi, Mrs. Tilson called a physician named Beverly McMillan, who specializes in obstetrics-gynecology. She has performed numerous procedures that result in the premature termination of pregnancy. By testimony and demonstrative is, [sic] she explained the four medical procedures used to terminate pregnancy. She testified that each procedure results in termination of life at the time or within minutes of the time of the procedure. According to Mrs. Tilson, the purpose of this evidence is to show the threatened harm she was [P. 15] trying to stop was imminent.

What Mrs. Tilson has proven by her witnesses LeJeune, Hilgers and McMillan is that genetically, histologically, obstetrically, and gynecologically, the scientific community is of opinion that life in homo sapiens begins at conception and continues on for an average life span unless interrupted by trauma or disease.

With witness Rue, Mrs. Tilson roves the scientific community is of opinion that great harm can occur to any number of persons joined in interest following termination of pregnancy other than by natural birth.

This scientific evidence of Mrs. Tilson's demonstrates that the scientific community has proved throug research and discovery what Mrs. Tilson believes by intuition.

The City's objection thereto is that this evidence is not relevant to the issue being litigated (K.S.A. 60-401(b)). The City does not contest the truth thereof.

To determine the relevancy of Mrs. Tilson's evidence, as well as the validity of her defense, it is necessary to note the law applicable on August 3, 1991 at the place of occurrence, particularly that pertaining to the issue of whether or not the voluntary premature termination of pregnancy is a wrong or harm with which Mrs. Tilson's defiance can be compared.

The voluntary premature termination of pregnancy was at common law deemed a criminal act. William Blackstone (1723-80) wrote that:

"To kill a child in its mother's womb is now no murder, but a great misprision..." (W. England 198).

At 1 Hale's P.C. 429 (cited in State vs. Harris, 90 Kan. 807, P. ), the law of England in the year 1670 is stated in this way at Page 812:

"But if a woman be with child and any gives her a potion to destroy the child within her, and she takes it and it works so strongly that it kills her, this is murder ..."

The Kansas Supreme Court in State vs. Harris was interpreting a statute that had been the law of Kansas since territory days whereby the legislature made "it a misdemeanor willfully to administer to any pregnant woman any medicine, drug or substance or use any instrument or means with intent thereby to produce abortion or the miscarriage of such woman, unless necessary or medically advised to be necessary to preserve her life," (Terr. Stat. 1855, Ch. 48, Sec. 39; G.S. 1868 Ch. 31, Sec. 44; R.S. 1923 21-437; G.S. 1949 21-437).

Our Supreme Court reasoned in Harris that the act of intentionally terminating a pregnancy was one mala in se. [Evil all by itself, even if it weren't illegal.] In support of such reasoning, other cases were cited with the opinion. Here is a part:

"The act was not only immoral, violative of the law of nature and deliberate in character, but reckless of life and wrongful per se" (At Page 814)

"At common law life is not only sacred but it is inalienable. To attempt to produce an abortion or miscarriage, except when necessary to save the life of the mother under advice of medical men, is an unlawful act and has always been regarded as fatal to the child and dangerous to the mother.”

[P. 17] It is instructive to note the court’s reference to the beginning of life at Page 817:

“The arbitrary refusal of the common law to regard the fetus as alive in such cases until quick was based on no sound physiological principles. Beck makes it plain that the movement recognized by the mother, and which is supposed to prove that her unborn child is alive, is merely one evidence of life, whereas unless life had existed long before the most disastrous consequences to the mother must have already been suffered (1 Beck Medical Jurisprudence 464-467).

Mrs. Tilson’s scientific evidence seems to prove what the Supreme Court of Kansas believed in 1913.

The same statutory law interpreted in Harris, Supra, became G.S. 1923, 21-437.

Here is the statute defining Kansas state policy:

“Every physician or other person who shall willfully administer to any pregnant woman any medicine, drug or substance whatsoever or shall use or employ any instrument or means whatsoever with intent thereby to procure abortion or the miscarriage of any such woman, unless the same shall have been necessary to preserve the life of such woman, or shall have been advised by a physician to be necessary for that purpose, shall upon conviction be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or by both such fine and imprisonment.”

The same state policy was codified at G.S. 1949, 21-437.

The Supreme Court of Kansas in 1953 at Joy vs. Brown (173 Kan. 823, 252 P.2d 889 @ Page 839) noted that the above statute was one of three enacted:

“For the purpose of protecting the life not only of the unborn child, but that of the mother ...”

“The state has a vital interest” in both, the court said [P. 18] in the same opinion.

The statute was repealed in 1969 (Chap. 180, Page 503, 1969 Ses. Laws of Kansas).

July 1, 1970 (Ses. Laws of Kan. 1969, Chap. 180, Sec. 21-3407) is the effective date of the legislative enactment that replaced G.S. 1949 21-437, Supra. The replacement statute provided that:

“(1) Criminal abortion is the purposeful and unjustifiable termination of the pregnancy of any female other than by a live birth. (2) A person licensed to practice medicine and surgery is justified in terminating a pregnancy if he believes there is substantial risk that a continuance of the pregnancy would impair the physical or mental health of the mother or that the child would be born with physical or mental defect, or that the pregnancy resulted from rape, incest or other felonious intercourse; and either: (a) Three persons licensed to practice medicine and surgery, one of whom may be the person performing the abortion, have certified in writing their belief in the justifying circumstances, and have filed such certificate prior to the abortion in the hospital licensed by the state board of health and accredited by the joint commission on accreditation of hospitals where it is to be performed or in such other place as may be designated by law; or (b) an emergency exists which requires that such abortion be performed immediately in order to preserve the life of the mother. (3) For the purpose of this section pregnancy means that condition of a female from the date of conception to the birth of her child (2) Of this section all illicit intercourse with a female under the age of sixteen (16) years shall be deemed felonious. (5) Criminal abortion is a class D felony.”

K.S.A. 65-443 is of interest. It goes to the general policy of the State of Kansas. There it is provided that:

“No person shall be required to perform or participate in medical procedures which result in the termination of a pregnancy and the refusal of any person to perform or participate in those medical procedures shall not be a basis [P. 19] for civil liability to any person. No hospital, hospital administrator or governing board of any hospital shall terminate the employment of, prevent or impair the practice or occupation of or impose any other sanction on any person because of such person's refusal to perform or participate in the termination."

Another statute illustrative of state policy in the area is K.S.A. 65-2837. That part pertinent here is this:

"(b) 'unprofessional conduct' means:

(5) performing, procuring or aiding and abetting in the performance or procurement of a criminal abortion."

The statute applies to all persons licensed by the State Board of Healing Arts (K.S.A. 65-2812).

In 1972 the United States District Court for the District of Kansas declared (339 F.Supp.986) Section 2(a) of K.S.A. 21-3407 violative of the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

It is not necessary to decide here what, if any, ramifications the federal district court's opinion may have had on prosecutions for violation of the statute in Kansas, because in January, 1973, the Supreme Court of the United States handed down Roe vs. Wade, Supra, and its companion case, Doe vs. Bolton, (410 U.S. 179, 35 L.Ed.2d 201, 93 S.Ct. 739, reh den 410 U.S. 959, 35 L.Ed.2d 694, 93 S.Ct. 1410).

Insofar as concerns the resolution of the issue here, the ruling in Roe is best summarized by the reporter of decisions at Page 155, Paragraph 3, where it is written that:

"State criminal abortion laws, like those involved here, that except from criminality only [p. 20] a life-saving procedure on the mother's behalf without regard to the stage of her pregnancy and other interests involved violate the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, which protects against state action the right to privacy, including a woman's qualified right to terminate her pregnancy. Though the State cannot override that right, it has legitimate interests in protecting both the pregnant woman's health and the potentiality of human life, each of which interests grows and reaches a “compelling” point at various stages of the woman’s approach to term. ... (c) For the stage subsequent to viability the State, in promoting its interest in the potentiality of human life, may if it chooses, regulate and even proscribe, abortion except where necessary, in appropriate medical judgment, for the preservation of the life or health of the mother.”

Doe, Supra, rendered unconstitutional any attempts by the legislature to impose into the decision to terminate a pregnancy the concurrence of physicians or groups other than the pregnant woman’s personal physician and herself.

When K.S.A. 21-3407 is viewed in light of Doe, Supra, with the guidance of that rule of statutory construction laid down in State vs. Trudell (243 Kan. 29, 755 P.2d 511) where, in part, at Syl. 2, the court said that “... a criminal statute with its punitive effect must be strictly construed against the state ...” it is clear that the statute is unconstitutional on its face.

The legal history of Kansas teaches that as a matter of public policy, the act of voluntarily terminating a pregnancy prior to term has been considered a wrongful act except when done under strict guidelines. The purpose is to protect the life of the unborn child and the mother (Joy vs. Brown, Supra). Roe, Supra, and Doe, Supra, declared a qualified constitutional right protecting a woman “from unduly [P. 21] burdensome interference with her freedom to decide whether to terminate her pregnancy,” (Casey vs. Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Penn., et al, 1992 W.L. 14546, decided June 29, 1992); but left the state government with a legitimate interest in both the woman and the premature life during the entire period of pregnancy (Roe, Supra; Webster vs. Reproductive Health Serv., 492 U.S. 490, 106 L.Ed.2d 410, 109 S.Ct. 3040 (1989); Casey, Supra; see also Joy vs. Brown, Supra).

It may be said that on August 3, 1991, a pregnant woman in the state of Kansas had an unqualified right to undergo a medical procedure meant to terminate her pregnancy at any time prior to term. Roe vs Wade, Supra, and Doe vs. Bolton, Supra (1973) rendered K.S.A. 21-3407, Supra, constitutionally void. Perhaps that is why there were no reported cases of prosecution thereunder during the 20 year life of the statute. The legislature took no action during the 18 years following. The Supreme Court of Kansas, during the same time period, did not act on the particular issue but did find that the unborn are not human being at any stage of pregnancy so far as the law of criminal homicide is concerned (State vs. Green, 245 Kan. 398; 781 P.2d 678; State vs. Trudell, Supra).

Mrs. Tilson says that this unqualified right to terminate a pregnancy at any stage contradicted the state's historical public policy. That is the wrong with which her defiance of the City's criminal trespass ordinance must be compared, she maintains.

In addition to the argument that the woman's right to terminate is not a wrong, the City argues (Tr. brief, Supra) that alternatives to law-breaking were available to Mrs. Tilson on that day. [P. 22]

Mrs. Tilson's evidence on that point proves that she had, prior to August 3, 1991, made contact with the legislature, federal and state, by telephone, writing and lobbying. She has protested the government's action in Roe vs. Wade, Supra, and the Kansas state government's nonaction following. She has peacefully assembled to petition her government for a redress of what she felt to be a grievance. She has exhausted her alternative remedies. The City's point is not well taken.

I will find that the City's evidence (Through Ms. Riggs) meant to show that the corporation's services were sold only to those pregnant women in the first trimester of pregnancy is not credible. The same is disbelieved.

I will find Mrs. Tilson's evidence proffered through witnesses Lejeune, Hilgers, McMillan and Rue relevant to the issue here. The entire evidence of her experts is admitted. The evidence proves that the medical and scientific communities dealing with the subject matter on a daily basis are of opinion that life in homo sapiens begins at conception; and harm is the result of termination of life under most circumstances.

That opinion—as a proposition based on intuition in earlier years—has always been foundation for the public policy in Kansas (State vs. Harris, Supra; Joy vs. Brown, Supra).

The City argues (Page 4, above) that Roe vs. Wade, Supra, declares that the voluntary termination of pregnancy cannot be a harm because it is legal. That is too broad an application.

[P. 23] Neither Roe vs. Wade, Supra; its companion case Doe vs. Bolton, Supra; nor their progeny (Webster vs. Reproductive Services et al, Supra; Casey vs. Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Penn., Supra) worked to abrogate the public policy of the state of Kansas that the voluntary act of prematurely terminating a pregnancy without qualifications is a wrongful act. [That is, none of those undermined Kansas policy that abortion is a “wrongful act” - a “harm” - unless it is to save the life of the mother.] Those federal cases only qualified that policy by constitutionally guaranteeing to each woman in Kansas or elsewhere a “qualified right” (Roe, Doe, Webster, Casey) to decide whether to terminate her pregnancy. [That is, those cases gave women a right to do it, but it’s still wrong.]

The act of termination of pregnancy without qualification, always violative of state policy as mala in se, was not by statute prohibited on August 3, 1991, given the peculiar state of affairs caused by the action of federal government (Roe vs. Wade), combined with the inaction of the state government.

The wrongfulness of the act (i.e. unqualified termination of pregnancy) is what must be compared with the wrongfulness of Mrs. Tilson's act of interfering with the right of a corporation and its invitees to engage in lawful business.

The courts in Kansas by tradition have been a place where citizens find a forum at which all with grievances can be heard, their actions measured by proper application of law, under an assurance that right be done and justice administered in every instance.

I will find that the doctrine of justification by necessity is applicable to the facts of this case. The facts of the case must be viewed in light of the law on August 3, 1991.

[P. 24] The doctrine is applied by weighing the two wrongs, while comparing the harm each seeks to avoid. The weighing must be done while balancing constitutionally guaranteed activities associated with these acts. The weighing and balancing must be done in light of the peculiar facts of the individual case.

The legislature of our state has acted since and perhaps in part because of Mrs. Tilson's defiance. It has by House Bill No. 2646 (effective July 1, 1992) reaffirmed the state's policy discussed above by exercising control of and regulating the act of voluntarily terminating a pregnancy prior to live birth. The legislature addressed the situation where citizens might do the same act as Mrs. Tilson did here.

Since Mrs. Tilson's defiance, the Supreme Court of the United States has reaffirmed the constitutional right of a woman to "decide whether to terminate her pregnancy," (Casey, Supra) prior to viability of the new life.

Any corporation authorized to do business and its clientele still have a right to do lawful business without interference under the law of this state.

Insofar as concerns the present matter, keeping the tradition that in all matters, right be done and justice administered, Mrs. Tilson's wrongful act done by violating the ordinance (Supra) was done to prevent a greater "harm" to society at large than that harm those running the city government for a time sought to prevent by enactment and enforcement of the ordinance.

[P. 25] Mrs. Tilson's wrongful act is forgiven in the eyes of the law under the doctrine of justification by necessity. She is discharged from further responsibility in the case.

The City's ordinance is still the law, even though certain application of it may be subject to interpretation in light of the provisions of H.B. 2646, but that is a subject for another day.

As in all legal matters, this case is decided on the peculiar facts of this particular case. It is not dispositive of any other matter whatsoever.

The length of this opinion can be attributed to the important [sic] of the subject matter addressed.

Judge Paul W. Clark, July 20, 1992.

Appendix I:

Iowa's Expanded Finding of Facts in a Simple Resolution

Whereas, Roe v. Wade spells out the conditions for Roe's own “collapse”, to wit: “[Texas argues] that the ‘fetus’ is a person. If this suggestion of personhood is established, the case [for legal abortion], of course, collapses, for the right to life would then be guaranteed specifically by the [14th] Amendment...” SCOTUS never reversed those conditions.
AND

Whereas, all legal authorities who have taken a position, in all five categories of court-recognized fact finders – juries<sup>i</sup>, expert witnesses<sup>ii</sup>, individual judges<sup>iii</sup>, state legislatures<sup>iv</sup> and Congress<sup>v</sup> – find unanimously that all unborn babies are humans and persons from fertilization. No American legal authority has said protectable “life begins” any later than fertilization, including Roe which said “we are not in a position to speculate”. AND

- i When proliferers blocked abortionists’ doors until 1993, the only disputed issue at trial was whether human lives were saved. The earliest juries ruled that they were, and acquitted, until judges stopped allowing defendants to tell juries that was their defense. A law school journal reports: “After the court ruled that it would allow the Defense to go to the jury, the ... Clinic dropped the prosecution.” (“Necessity as a Defense to a Charge of Criminal Trespass in an Abortion Clinic”, 48 U.Cin.L.Rev. 501 (1979), in a footnote, p. 502.
- ii “If the defense is permitted, evidence is introduced that life begins at conception. This evidence [from doctors or scientists] is rarely contradicted by the prosecution...” Ibid.
- iii For example, Judge Clark, who ruled for a defendant who flew in a world renowned geneticist from France to testify. Clark was overturned in City of Wichita v. Tilson, 253 Kan. 285 (1993).
- iv “At least 38 states have enacted fetal-homicide statutes, and 28 of those statutes protect life from conception.” Hamilton v. Scott, 97 So. 3d 728 (Ala. 2012)
- v “‘unborn child’ means a child in utero, and the term ‘child in utero’ or ‘child, who is in utero’ means a member of the species Homo Sapiens, at any stage of development, who is carried in the womb”, 18 U.S.C. § 1841(d)

Whereas, Roe v. Wade invites court-recognized fact finders such as state legislatures to “establish” “when life begins”. Had this been established as a matter of law, SCOTUS would not have said “the judiciary...is not in a position to speculate” about such a “difficult question” because “those trained in...medicine...and theology are unable to [agree]”. Roe v. Wade 410 US 113, 159 AND

Whereas, all precedent including Roe agrees that all humans are persons. Roe v. Wade 410 U.S. 113, 133 (1973) equates the time an unborn child becomes “recognizably human” with the time the child becomes a “person”, to wit: “These disciplines variously approached the question in terms of the point at which the embryo or fetus became ‘formed’ or recognizably human, or in terms of when a ‘person’ came into being, that is, infused with a ‘soul’ or ‘animated.’” See also Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U.S.228, 242 (1896), “The term ‘person’ is broad enough to include any and every human being within the jurisdiction of the republic...This has been decided so often that the point does not require argument.” Steinberg v. Brown 321 F. Supp. 741 (N.D. Ohio, 1970) “[o]nce human life has commenced, the constitutional protections found in the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments impose upon the state a duty of safeguarding it,” Id 746-47. AND

Whereas, SCOTUS must accept facts “found” [established] in federal law [by Congress] that are not obviously irrational. “..the existence of facts supporting the legislative judgment is to be presumed...not to be pronounced unconstitutional unless in the light of the facts made known or generally assumed it is of such a character as to preclude the assumption that it rests upon some rational basis within the knowledge and experience of the legislators....” U.S. v. Carolene Products, 304 U.S. 144, 152 (1938) AND

Whereas, Congress established in 2004 that: “‘unborn child’ means a child in utero, and the term ‘child in utero’ or ‘child, who is in utero’ means a member of the species Homo Sapiens, at any stage of development, who is carried in the womb”, 18 U.S.C. § 1841(d). This fact is not undermined by clause (c) which does not “permit [authorize] the prosecution of any person for...an abortion for which the consent of the pregnant woman...has been obtained....” Failure to outlaw a harm in a particular situation does not prevent the outlawing of it later, and 18 U.S.C. § 1841(c) has no power to prevent states from criminalizing abortion as the 14th Amendment requires once the humanity of the unborn is established by 18 U.S.C. § 1841(d). AND

Whereas, Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 945, 954 (1992) did not replace Roe's constitutional basis for legal abortion – inability to tell “when life begins” – with Casey's new basis: how much women had come to “rely” on abortion. Casey did not say “when life begins” no longer matters, or that relying on abortion can justify keeping abortion legal after it is known that it kills human beings. Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833 (1992) AND

Whereas, Webster v. Reproductive Health Services (492 U.S. 490), 1989 did not say personhood laws have no power to topple Roe, but only “It will be time enough for federal courts to address the meaning of the [Personhood law] should it be applied to restrict the activities of [the abortionists] in some concrete way.” Id at 506. In fact, clear state penalties for abortion would trigger SCOTUS review of Roe: “there will be time enough to reexamine Roe, and to do so carefully... When the constitutional invalidity of a State's abortion statute actually turns upon the constitutional validity of Roe”, Concurrence by O'Conner, Id. at 526. AND

Whereas, The 14th Amendment “equal protection of the laws” is for all who are in fact humans. Had it been only for those who are legally recognized as human, every deprivation of fundamental rights by any state law would be “constitutional” so long as the law questions whether its victims are “persons in the whole sense”. AND

Whereas, the authority of U.S. law is superior to the authority of the U.S. Supreme Court, in the sense that up until such time as courts declare laws unconstitutional, courts must conform their rulings to them. No court has declared 18 U.S.C. § 1841 or the many similar state laws unconstitutional, despite dozens of challenges. To do so would require the Court to positively affirm that human life does not begin until birth, which no legal authority has done. AND

Whereas, no baby is protected except to the extent all babies are protected because (1) There is no nonarbitrary line between birth and conception distinguishing “humans” from “nonpersons”; (2) Without such a line, there can be no stage of gestation at which the deliberate killing of a baby can be objectively distinguished from murder; (3) The failure of some adults to grasp the humanity of babies at any given stage is a dangerous basis for permitting killing, since as many adults fail to grasp the full humanity of quite a number of discrete groups of born persons; (4) The capacity to choose between good and evil – to choose to behave either as an angel or as a demon – is a capacity that distinguishes humans from animals. It is not related to brain size, since animals with much larger brains lack this capacity, while babies with much smaller than adult brains demonstrate this capacity. No known physical process accounts for this ability, supporting the almost universally accepted belief that a soul attaches to the body whose capacity for discerning good from evil, and choosing between them, and being harmed by evil and blessed by good, is not limited to physical body size; and (5) Luke 1 says John, at 6 months’ gestation, leaped for joy at the sound of a righteous voice, which shows capacity to prefer good over evil, three months before birth.

Therefore, be it resolved, that:

Legal Abortion technically and legally “collapsed” on April Fool’s Day, 2004. 18 U.S.C. § 1841(d) precisely meets the conditions laid out in Roe’s “collapse” clause even if the uncontested consensus of fact finders before that did not; AND

This state has no further legal obligation to refrain from criminalizing abortion, or to support or protect abortion in any way; AND

After 18. U.S.C. §1841 it is impossible to treat ex-utero and intra-utero children differently without violating the 14th Amendment rights of one or the other: therefore this state is legally obligated to protect unborn children as effectively as it protects born children; AND

Criminal laws against abortion by this state are not bold, legally dubious attempts by one state to rewrite the legal landscape for the entire nation, but will merely bring state law into conformity with federal law and precedent, including the requirements of Roe v. Wade itself; AND

Any judge or court which attempts to block this state's effort to bring its laws into conformity with the Constitution will, in so doing, violate Roe v. Wade, interfere with this state's compliance with federal law, and be an accessory to genocide according to federal law; AND

Should any state judge interfere with this state's obligation to obey the 14th Amendment obligation to protect its unborn citizens from abortion, this legislature will consider such exercise of the legislative function, in order to perpetuate genocide, through an unconstitutional ruling, to be exceeding the judicial powers given by the Iowa Constitution, which is Malfeasance in Office, a ground of impeachment; AND Should any federal judge so interfere, this legislature urges its congressional delegation to pursue disciplinary action such as that outlined in "Bringing the Courts Back Under the Constitution".

(<https://newt.org/wp-content/uploads/2013/04/Courts.pdf>)

Appendix J:

Dorland's Illustrated Medical Dictionary cited in Roe

Four mammalian embryos at various stages of development: A, hog; B, calf; C, rabbit; D, human. (Viltee: from Romanes' "Darwin and After Darwin," after Haeckel, with the permission of the Open Court Publishing Company.)

Roe v. Wade, p. 157:
 "B. The pregnant woman cannot be isolated in her privacy. She carries an embryo and, later, a fetus, if one accepts the medical definitions of the developing young in the human uterus. See Dorland's Illustrated Medical Dictionary 478-479, 547 (24th ed. 1965)."

embryo (em-bre-o) [Gr. embryon]. 1. The early or developing stage of any organism, especially the developing product of fertilization of an egg. In the human, the embryo is generally considered to be the developing organism from one week after conception to the end of the second month. 2. The element in the seed of plants which develops into a new individual. hexacanth e., the embryo of Taenia saginata as found in the intestinal tract of cattle. presomite e., the embryo at any stage prior to the appearance of the first somite. prewillous e., the embryo at any stage prior to the appearance of the chorionic villi. somite e., the embryo at any stage between the appearances of the first and the last somites. Spee's e., an embryo described by Spee as being between one and two weeks old. Wilms's e. See under tumor.

p. 547

fetus (fe'tus) [L.]. The unborn offspring of any viviparous animal; the developing young in the human uterus after the end of the second month. Before 8 weeks it is called an embryo; it becomes an infant when it is completely outside the body of the mother, even before the cord is cut. f. acardi'acus, acardius. f. amor'phus, holoacardius amorphus. calcified f., lithopedion. f. compres'sus, f. papyraceus. harlequin f., a fetus with congenital ichthyosis. f. in fe'tu, a small, imperfect fetus, incapable of independent life, contained within the body of another fetus, the autosite. mummified f., a shriveled and dried-up fetus. paper-doll f., papyraceous f., f. papyraceus. f. papyra'ceus, a dead fetus pressed flat by the growth of a living twin. parasitic f., an incomplete minor fetus attached to a larger, more completely developed fetus, or autosite. f. sanguinolent'is, a dead fetus which has undergone maceration. sireniform f., a sirenomelus, or sympus.

Dorland's Diagrams: Frauds

The following background on these diagrams, which were a key rationale for Roe to doubt that the unborn are “recognizably human”, is posted at www.wayoflife.org/free\_ebooks/downloads/Lyng\_Evolutionary\_Art.pdf

(p. 8) Haeckel's Embryo Chart

It was Ernest Haeckel, Charles Darwin's most enthusiastic disciple in Germany, who devised the iconic embryo chart “proving” that at the embryonic stage man looks almost exactly like various types of animals.

He based this on his “law of recapitulation” (also called the biogenetic law) which stated that the human embryo goes through an evolutionary cycle during which it resembles a single-celled marine organism, then a worm, then a fish with gill slits, then a monkey with a tail, and finally a human. According to recapitulation, each creature repeats or recapitulates the entire alleged evolutionary history. Thus, the human embryo progresses from a single cell to a fish to an amphibian to a reptile to a mammal to an ape to a human.

Haeckel's embryo chart first appeared in print in 1866 in his book Generelle Morphologie der Organismen and in 1868 in The Natural History of Creation, and since then it has been republished in various forms in countless textbooks, journals, popular reports, and museums. It is still appearing in textbooks in the 21st century. One teacher said, "I have taught Jr. High Science for over 35 years. Every textbook from every major publisher I have ever seen has had Haeckel's embryos pictured and the text usually claims this as a proof for evolution" (<http://creation.com/fraudrediscovered>).

The influence of the embryo chart has been incalculable. Dr. Carl Werner testifies that he was confronted with Haeckel's embryo chart in his first class in medical school in 1977, and this convinced him that evolution is true.

(p. 9) "These drawings were extremely compelling to me, especially the 'fact' that humans had gills and a tail. After this lecture, I found myself rapidly accepting evolution" (Evolution: The Grand Experiment, Vol. 2, p. 2).

The problem is that it is a grand scientific fraud, and it has been known by scientists to be a fraud since the 19th century!

Haeckel mislabeled embryos; he changed the size of embryos; he deleted parts; he added parts; he changed parts. For example, Haeckel took a drawing of a monkey embryo and removed its arms, legs, navel, heart, and yolk sac to make it look like a fish embryo. He then labeled it "Embryo of a Gibbon in the fish-stage." In fact, it wasn't a gibbon even before it was doctored; it was some other type of ape.

For his "embryo of man in the fish-stage," Haeckel either removed or doctored more than half of the embryos' essential organs.

"His piece de resistance was his manipulation of the drawing of a human embryo by Ecker. He changed the details of the human eye significantly, made the human posterior twice its actual length, took 2 mm off the head, and like the Macaque, removed the arms, legs and heart" ("The Life of Ernst Haeckel," Creation Worldview Ministries, http://www.creationworldview.org/articles\_view.asp?id=29).

Haeckel also brazenly ignored every facet of embryology that directly disproved his theory.

Haeckel's deception was exposed by Ludwig Rutimeyer, a professor at the University of Basel, who brought the matter to the attention of the university at Jena. Rutimeyer called the drawings "a sin against scientific truthfulness." Rutimeyer demonstrated that Haeckel had used the same

(p. 10) woodcut of a dog embryo three times to depict the supposed wormlike stage of what he called the embryos of a dog, a chicken, and a tortoise. Haeckel was convicted at a university tribunal and made a "confession" of sorts, but even his confession was a lie. He claimed that his draughtsman made the blunder, not acknowledging that he was the draughtsman (Russell Grigg, "Fraud Rediscovered," <http://creation.com/fraud-rediscovered>).

Haeckel's embryo fraud was also exposed early on by Wilhelm His, Sr., professor of anatomy at the university of Leipzig. His showed how that Haeckel had doctored his embryo charts to make them fit his theory and concluded that "anyone who engaged in such blatant fraud had forfeited all respect and that Haeckel had eliminated himself from the ranks of scientific research workers of any stature" (cited from Shawn Boonstra, Out of Thin Air, p. 47).

In spite of his deception and in spite of having been exposed, Haeckel continued as a professor at Jena for another 30 years and continued to promote his evolutionary deception far and wide.

In 1915 Haeckel's fraud was publicized in the book Haeckel's Frauds and Forgeries by Joseph Assmuth and Ernest Hull, which cited 19 authorities, but this carefully documented work was largely ignored by Darwinian scientists and educators in their zeal to disprove the Bible.

In the late 1990s, a team led by Michael Richardson, embryologist at St. George's Hospital Medical School, London, did extensive research into the embryo to test Haeckel's chart. Richardson gathered an international team of scientists who examined and photographed embryos of 39 different species at stages comparable to those depicted in

(p. 11) Haeckel's chart. Richardson concluded that Haeckel was "an embryonic liar." In a 1997 interview with Nigel Hawkes, Richardson said,

‘THIS IS ONE OF THE WORST CASES OF SCIENTIFIC FRAUD. It's shocking to find that somebody one thought was a great scientist was deliberately misleading. It makes me angry ... What he [Haeckel] did was to take a human embryo and copy it, pretending that the salamander and the pig and all the others looked the same at the same stage of development. They don't ... These are fakes" (Nigel Hawkes' interview with Richardson, The Times, Aug. 11, 1997, p. 14).

A major error of Haeckel's embryo chart is the misidentification of "gill slits" on the human embryo. In fact, they are not gill slits at all. They have no respiratory function. "The so-called 'gill slits' are really wrinkles in the throat region. This body tissue becomes the palatine tonsils, middle ear canal, parathyroid gland, and thymus. ... These folds in the neck region of the mammalian embryo are not gills in any sense of the word and never have anything to do with breathing. They are merely inward folds, or wrinkles, in the neck region resulting from the sharply down-turned head and protruding heart of the developing embryo" (Alan Gillen, Body by Design, p. 33)

Child psychologist Benjamin Spock promoted Haeckel's doctrine of recapitulation in his popular books: "Each child as he develops is retracing the whole history of mankind, physically and spiritually, step by step. A baby starts off in the womb as a single tiny cell, just the way the first living thing appeared in the ocean. Weeks later, as he lies in the amniotic fluid of the womb, he has gills like a fish..." (Baby and Child Care, 1957, p. 223).

(p. 12) Haeckel's myth that the developing human embryo is animal-like has encouraged the modern abortion industry. Dr. Henry Morris wrote:

"We can justifiably charge this evolutionary nonsense of recapitulation with responsibility for the slaughter of helpless, pre-natal children--or at least for giving it a pseudo-scientific rationale" (The Long War against God, 1989, p. 139).

We have seen that Haeckel believed that the embryo is still in the evolutionary stage and not fully human. He said that it is "completely devoid of consciousness, is a pure 'reflex machine,' just like a lower vertebrate" (Weikart, p. 147). Thus, killing an unborn baby would be like killing an animal.

Haeckel taught that even the newborn child has no soul and therefore infanticide "cannot rationally be classed as murder" (Haeckel, The Wonders of Life, 1904, p. 21). For physically or mentally handicapped infants, Haeckel r e c o m m e n d e d " a s m a l l d o s e o f m o r p h i n e o r c y a n i d e " (Weikart, p. 147).

In 1990, Carl Sagan and his wife, Ann Druyan, argued that abortion is ethical on the grounds that the fetus is not fully human until the sixth month. Taking Haeckel's recapitulation theory as fact, they claimed that the embryo begins as “a kind of parasite” and changes into something like a fish with “gill arches” and then becomes “reptilian” and finally “mammalian.” By the end of the second month, the fetus “is still not quite human” (“The Question of Abortion: A Search for the Answers,” Parade, April 22, 1990).

Biology textbooks continue to use the embryo chart as a major evidence for evolution. In some cases, they repeat Haeckel’s doctrine of recapitulation, while it is more

(p. 13) common for the embryo chart to be used as an example of homology.

Biology: The Dynamics of Life by Merrill Publishing (1991) goes full bore for the doctrine of recapitulation:

“The fossil record indicates that aquatic, gill-breathing vertebrates preceded air-breathing land forms, and comparisons of embryos of different classes of vertebrates support this view of evolutionary change. An embryo is an organism in its earliest stages of development. In the early stages of embryo development of reptiles, birds, and mammals, a tail and gill slits can be observed. As you know, fish use gills to breathe under water. Fish embryos retain these structures; reptile, bird, and mammal embryos lose them as their development continues. In the human embryo, a tail is visible up to the sixth week of development. In humans, the tail disappears, but in fish, reptiles, and birds the tail is retained into maturity” (Biology: The Dynamics of Life, p. 202).

Modern Biology by Holt, Rinehart, and Winston (1999) features the chart on page 291 with the accompanying text: “Although modern embryologists have discovered that Haeckel exaggerated some features in his drawings, it is true that early embryos of many different vertebrate species look remarkably similar.”

(Observe how casually this textbook whitewashes Haeckel’s deception!)

The Prentice Hall Biology textbook of 2002, edited by Kenneth Miller and Joseph Levine, is another example of the use of the embryo chart as homology. On page 385 there are photos of the embryos of a chicken, turtle, and rat, with this statement: “In their early stages of development, chickens, turtles, and rats look similar, providing evidence that they shared a common ancestry.”

(p. 14) While some evolutionists are using modified editions of Haeckel’s embryonic chart, others have removed his name and attributed the chart to Karl Ernst von Baer, the discoverer of the female egg cell. This is a great error, because von Baer taught against Darwinian evolution as well as against Haeckel's doctrine of recapitulation!

This error of attributing embryonic recapitulation to von Baer actually started with Charles Darwin, who quoted him in On the Origin of Species.

“Darwin cited von Baer as the source of his embryological evidence, but at the crucial point Darwin distorted that evidence to make it fit his theory. Von Baer lived long enough to object to Darwin's misuse of his observations, and he was a strong critic of Darwinian evolution until his death in 1876” (Jonathan Wells, Icons of Evolution, p. 86).

In a 2008 documentary, Oxford atheist Richard Dawkins was still using the Haeckel embryo chart. Entitled “The Genius of Charles Darwin,” the documentary was a three-part television production written and presented by Dawkins. It was first shown in August 2008 on British channel 4. The Haeckel chart appears in episode 1.

Science is self-correcting, we are told. But deceptive evolutionary icons such as the embryo chart, the horse chart, and the peppered moth have continued to be used decade after decade even though they have been debunked. In fact, the embryo chart was debunked more than a century ago.

Great spiritual and moral damage can be done by the perpetuation of myths

Lying Evolutionary Art Copyright 2011 by David W. Cloud This edition February 3 2012 ISBN 78-1-58318-139-3 This book is published for free distribution in eBook format. It is available in PDF, MOBI (for Kindle, etc.), and ePUB formats from the Way of Life web site. We do not allow distribution of this book from other web sites. Published by Way of Life Literature PO Box 610368, Port Huron, MI 48061 866-295-4143 (toll free) - fbns@wayoflife.org www.wayoflife.org Canada: Bethel Baptist Church 4212 Campbell St. N., London Ont. N6P 1A6 519-652-2619